THE ERUPTIONS OF VACCINATION AND RE-VACCINATION.*

BY ISADORE DYER, PH. B., M. D., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Reprinted from the February, 1895, number of the New Orleans Medical and Surgical Journal

Vaccinia is a disease sui generis, not at all infrequent in the lower animals, particularly the cow, dog, sheep, pig, horse, goat and monkey (Shoemaker). The history of its discovered similarity to variola, and the application of this discovery in the prophylaxis and prevention of small-pox, is familiar to all of us. In studying the eruptions of vaccination the simplest and best method would be to arrange the eruptions etiologically. Malcolm Morris has done this so well that I can do no better than reproduce his suggestions for the division of vaccination eruptions into groups.

He first of all makes two general subdivisions, into:

1. Eruptions due to pure vaccine inoculation.
2. Eruptions due to mixed inoculation with vaccine, with which an additional virus, or several viruses, has become mixed.

In the first group, he arranges the several eruptions which attend and follow the local inoculation. I believe that in some instances this grouping can be expanded, and, with this end in view, I propose taking up in detail Morris' subdivisions.

Vaccination, the World's Greatest Humbug

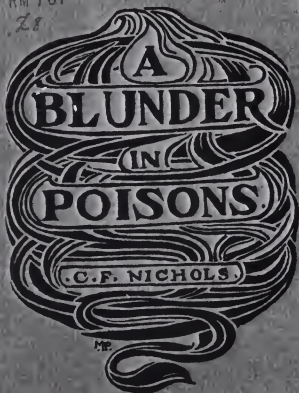

It is acknowledged that the Illinois State Board of Health of 1881-82 were better informed on the subject of vaccination than any other body of men, and none have done more careful explaining than they did in their Fifth Annual Report. Not only was the Illinois Board interested in this great work, but the boards of eleven other states assisted. All their careful work was done with no other purpose in view than to have congress pass laws in their favor, setting up a vaccination monarchy for them, and giving them full control in quarantine matters. The report mentioned is of the years 1881 and 1882, during which time there occurred a great epidemic of small-pox in the state of Illinois. After careful study I find that there is satisfactory evidence that the great epidemic which occurred at that time was really invented and made to exist by the various boards of health and their helpers, and what an easy thing this would be! Strange as this may appear, it is proven to be true by their own report, which testifies to this effect.

VACCINATION THE CAUSE OF SMALL-POX.

By Porter F. Cope.

(Reprinted from The Healthy Life, Scranton, Penn.,
February, 1907.)

It is a remarkable and significant fact that of the pestilential maladies which scourged the human race during the middle ages small-pox alone has continued to exist in the presence of sanitary measures and improvements, despite the circumstance that it is the only one of those diseases against which a certain prophylactic is claimed to have been discovered, namely, vaccination.

The black death of 1348 destroyed at least one-fifth of the inhabitants of England, and raged from China to Ireland. "How many amiable young persons," wrote Boccaccio, "breakfasted with their friends in the morning, who, when evening came, supped with their ancestors." The mysterious sweating sickness, which first appeared in 1485, after the Wars of the Roses, is said to have been even more fatal than the black death. Yet these two diseases, which caused friend to desert friend, and mothers to flee from their stricken children, now retain only an historical interest.

The bubonic plague, which devastated the whole Roman empire in the sixth century, and remained a constant menace to Europe for more than a thousand years thereafter, which brought desolation into almost every household in London in 1665, was readily controlled after systems of quarantine were put in operation, though the disease itself had lost none of its virulence. When it last appeared as an epidemic in France, in 1722, letters from Marvejols stated that almost

ANTI-VACCINATION CONFERENCE.

Philadelphia, October 1, 1908.

TO THE ANTI-VACCINATIONISTS AND THE ANTI-VACCINATION SOCIETIES OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA, AND TO ALL PERSONS WHO ARE OPPOSED TO COMPULSORY VACCINATION:

You are cordially invited to attend a Conference of the opponents of Compulsory Vaccination to be held in Philadelphia, from Monday, October 19, to Wednesday, October 21, 1908, inclusive.

The objects of the Conference are:

First—To promote the universal acceptance of the principle that health is nature's greatest safeguard against disease, and that therefore the State has no right to demand the impairment of the health of any person, whether by vaccination or by any other means.

Second—To advance the campaign of education among the people respecting the effects of vaccination, including its influence in causing degeneration, deteriorating the public health, and spreading small-pox, cancer, tuberculosis and other diseases.

Third—To consider the advisability of forming a federation of all the anti-vaccinationists in the United States and Canada, in order to concentrate the movement against compulsory vaccination, by mutual encouragement and cooperation.

The Doctor's Daughter

(A Serum-Comic Tragedy)

SHE was a doctors child, and he Embraced the opportunity
From all disease to make her free
With absolute immunity.

"And first," said he, "as I endorse
Prevention of diphtheria,
This anti-toxin from a horse
Should kill some bad bacteria.

"This vaccine virus from a cow
(And I endorse it fully),
Should help along, and anyhow
I will make the child feel 'bully.'

"O! snake-bite serum just a touch;
We get it from a rabbit
Which we have bitten up so much
It really likes the habit.

"Some meningitis toxin, too,
Would better be injected;
A guinea pig we strain it through
To get it disinfected.

"Some various serums of my own
I'm rather sure will answer;
I make them for all troubles known,
From freckles up to cancer."

Alas! Alas! for all his pains
The end was scarce desirous;
She soon had nothing in her veins
But various kinds of virus.

Part horse, part cow, part sheep, part goat;
Her laugh was half a whinney;
"Dear me," said he, "she's half a shoat
And badly mixed with guinea.

"A girl who bleats and chews a cud
Will never make a woman;
I'd better get some good clean blood
And make her partly human!"

SYPHILIS AND VACCINATION

(FOURTH ED.)

THE "Great-Pox" (syphilis) appeared in frightful form throughout Europe at end of the sixteenth century, with hideous eruptions, gland-abscesses, destruction of tissues to the bone, and death or life-long suffering. This disease is still present in every community, often progressing beyond medical control. Incurred solely through exposure to the syphilitic poison, when once established it is a life-long disfigurement and shame.

"Great-Pox" was followed in after years by "Small-Pox," a disorder comparatively so moderate in danger and disfigurement that it thus gained the milder appellation. A name, which was, however, given ignorantly and inapplicable, for small-pox (variola) has no kinship with syphilis. The Lifelong: Small-pox is an eruptive fever, after running its course it leaves the body; modernly treated this malady seldom brings death or disfigurement, nor more of contagion than measles or scarlet-fever. Compared with syphilis the smaller disease constantly grows less to be feared.

For over forty years, vaccination in its effort to protect from "small" pox has been officially Vaccination and Smallpox in England and Wales since 1896; the actual facts.

In consequence of misleading statements circulated in the Reichstag and elsewhere, the following facts, taken from official sources are submitted for the consideration of impartial investigators.

In 1896 the percentage of *available children vaccinated was 74; in 1897 it was 70.3; and in 1898, 69.3.

In 1898 an Act of Parliament was passed which contained what is known as the Conscience Clause.

Instead of reducing the number of vaccinations, the Act of 1898 increased this total. The reasons of the increase were many, of which the following three were the most important:—(1) simultaneously with the Act of 1898 coming in force (January 1st, 1899) the Government Department which has charge of the vaccination arrangements for the country issued an Order, based on a decision in the High Court, under which all control of the officials whose duty it was to carry out the Vaccination Acts was taken away from the local authorities—i.e., the Boards of Guardians. Until that time, if Boards of Guardians were elected by the people from amongst the opponents of vaccination, the Acts were not put in force. In 1898 nearly 150 Boards refused to set the law in motion. The alteration made by the Local Government Board gave the Vaccination Officers the right to decide whether they would prose-

COMPULSORY VACCINATION—A CRIME AGAINST CHILDHOOD

A HEART TO HEART TALK

From Mr. Loyster and Mr. Higgins to the Legislature

The Slaughter of School Children by this Medical Barbarism is Appalling. It must be stopped, by repealing all compulsion and leaving our Schools Free to every Healthy Child, or, by Prosecuting this Crime in our Courts.

STENOGRAPHIC REPORT FOR THE LAWMAKERS AND THE PUBLIC

To the Legislature, Albany, New York:

The following is a verbatim stenographic report of the statement made by Mr. James A. Loyster, of Cazenovia, N. Y., before the Health Committees of the Senate and Assembly at the public hearing on the Jones-Tallett Bill to amend the school vaccination law held at Albany on February 10, 1915, and it merits the close attention of every member in the Senate and Assembly and of every parent of school children in this State. Only the sub-headings on some paragraphs have been added by the undersigned.

PRIVILEGED PUBLICATION OF STARTLING FACTS

Our legislators, newspaper men and lawyers know that all legislative proceedings and communications are fully "privileged" under the law and can be freely published throughout the State. Hence the Anti-Vaccination League of America now freely publishes this splendid address of Mr. Loyster, who has also prepared a masterly pamphlet showing the deaths of thirty or more children from vaccination in this State in 1914, including his own son. To those who have not received and may desire a copy of this valuable pamphlet, which is a shocking indictment against all compulsory vaccination, we would suggest that they write to Mr. Loyster who kindly offers to send it. The cost of printing and posting this pamphlet is about ten cents each.

Criticism of the Latest Official Defence of Vaccination.

The Ministry of Health has recently published a small unsigned pamphlet entitled "Smallpox and Vaccination," price 3d. The pamphlet is marked "For Official Use," and it is apparently designed to provide health officials with ready-made arguments in defence of vaccination.

Reports in the public press show that the pamphlet has already been discussed at meetings of Boards of Guardians and Rural District Councils. Whether this signifies that it has been sent officially to the Clerks to those bodies we cannot say, but we offer a strong protest against the publication because it suppresses vital facts and sets forth misleading arguments in regard to the question with which it pretends to deal, and also because it is an unnecessary and unjust expenditure of public money.

As examples of the misleading character of the pamphlet, we would draw attention to the following:—

SOWING SMALLPOX.—In the first section, entitled "Experience of Smallpox in England and Wales," reference is made to the great prevalence of smallpox in past times, when the practice of smallpox inoculation was widespread, and it is incidentally admitted that this practice was "capable of spreading the natural disease to other persons who were not protected by previous attack of smallpox." Notwithstanding this admission, the pamphlet proceeds, on the opposite page, to ascribe the decrease in smallpox mortality which took place when inoculation was displaced by vaccination, in the first quarter of the nineteenth century, solely to vaccination. It is surely obvious that the mere cessation of the practice of smallpox inoculation was alone sufficient to account for the early decrease in smallpox mortality. Yet no recognition of this fact appears in the pamphlet. So certain were the earlier upholders of vaccination that smallpox inoculation spreads smallpox that they secured the inclusion of a clause in the Vaccination Act of 1840 making the practice a penal offence punishable with a month's imprisonment.

SANITATION.—It is denied in the pamphlet that smallpox has been amenable to sanitary improvements since these improvements have not led to any special decline of "Measles and whooping-cough, which are diseases of childhood as smallpox was in pre-vaccination days." But according to Dr. Creighton, the great student of epidemic diseases, smallpox was not always a disease of childhood in pre-vaccination days. On October 8th, 1921, "The British Medical Journal" summarised Dr. Creighton's epidemiological doctrine as follows: "The decline of smallpox after the Jennerian epoch was but the unfolding of a secular evolution which began long before Jenner's century.

SIR,

I am directed by the Council of the National Anti-Vaccination League to draw your attention to the following representations in regard to the paragraphs on vaccination contained in your first Annual Report as Chief Medical Officer of the newly-established Ministry of Health.

Although you avow your faith in vaccination, we cannot help but be favourably impressed by the relatively small amount of space which you give to the subject as compared with the large space devoted to it in the Annual Reports (especially the earlier Annual Reports) of your predecessors in office. We trust that this may be regarded as an indication that you will be fair-minded enough to look at the question from all sides, and to give due weight to the views of those who have, for nearly three-quarters of a century, in the face of the fiercest legal and extra-legal persecution of modern times, steadily and strenuously opposed the public endowment and enforcement of an operation which has been defined by one of your own staff as "consisting in the intentional transference to the human being of the eruptive disease of cattle called cowpox (vaccinia)." WINGED WORDS.

By Dr. HERBERT SNOW

Late Senior Surgeon (29 years Surgeon), Cancer Hospital, London.
Consulting Surgeon, Battersea Hospital.

"And Athene drew nigh and spake to him in winged words."

—Homer's Odyssey.

THE NATIONAL ANTI-VACCINATION LEAGUE.

A SUCCINCT history of this—one of the most sterling and practically important of all associations labouring for the extinction of vivisection iniquities—will probably be read with appreciation by the readers of "The Starry Cross." For the League is the corner-stone of the whole edifice of anti-vivisection activities.

It was not only the first to commence the strife, but its beneficent work has ever tended to widen and expand commensurately with the continuous increase in medical pretensions and medical imposture throughout the many years which have elapsed since its foundation. In my humble view, it is the doughtiest champion we have in the battle now raging over the whole world.

And the reasons for this supremacy are not far to seek. The League is throughout genuine and true. All its supporters are thoroughly convinced of the righteousness of its attitude, as of the veracity and perfectly scientific correctness of the arguments on which that rests. The great majority have personally experienced in themselves, or in some member of their families, the harm wrought by Jennerian vaccination. That experience counts more than tons of scientific or even humanitarian reasoning in its influence on the individual. He who has felt the actual pinch of the shoe must needs be a far more strenuous and persistent advocate of means to lessen that painful pressure than one who has heard of this merely as a pang suffered by others.

I would also fain add that there is not the smallest taint of commercialism, the bane of this our epoch. There is no question of making money. The League is, and always has been, poor. It attracts no benefits or legacies by the wealthy. Its supporters mainly belong to the labouring classes and have directly suffered from the atrocious, as well as futile, practice.

In 1866 the late Mr. Richard Butler Gibbs founded "The Anti-Compulsory Vaccination League." His cousin, John Gibbs, was one of the foremost pioneers of the early movement and had framed in 1855 the first systematic indictment of vaccination. Richard, a member of the Bishop Auckland Board of Guardians, had previously cautioned his colleagues that they were likely "to become (as they since have) the tools of a central medical clique." The phrase is significant and well fits these modern times. He now found it essential to "gather together the scattered elements of resistance."

These elements had been smouldering ever since Jenner's imposition on the world in 1798 of a practice in which he did not himself believe, utterly scouted, in fact. As a preventive of small-pox, Jenner advocated inoculation with matter derived from "horse-grease," a disease of the horse's heel. He described it as "the true and genuine life-preserving fluid" and used it without any reference to the cow.

Later, the matter taken from pustules of cow-pox—an epidemic disease of the cow, now happily extinct—came to be officially adopted as the orthodox "preventive." But this had been introduced by Pearson and Woodville, not in the least by Jenner. The latter worthy, however, stood in and claimed all the credit of their exertions. He contrived to get it, and with this a reward of £30,000 sterling voted by the Legislature. Never was a more repulsive and nauseous fraud from any point of view.

Richard Gibbs died in 1871. Then his Society rather languished till it was revived in 1876 by Mr. William Hume-Rothery. Finally, in 1880 was formed that "London Society for the Abolition of Compulsory Vaccination" which is now styled "The National Anti-Vaccination League." The late Mr. William Tebb was its first president, and his paper "The Vaccination Inquirer" was adopted as its Press organ. Since then progress has ever been continuous, saving only that terrible hindrance to all forms of humane and rational activity produced by the late war, whose fell results we are still realising in clumsy

Replies to Statements in Circular issued by the National Baby Week Council

Statement: "Vaccination is a means of safeguarding children and adults against smallpox."

Reply: As thousands of vaccinated cases in adults have been recorded by pro-vaccinatist doctors, it is unnecessary to labour the point that vaccination is not a means of safeguarding adults from smallpox; 20,000 cases of smallpox in vaccinated persons were reported to the Royal Commission.

As regards children, Dr. Barry in his report on the Sheffield smallpox epidemic admitted that there were 10 cases among vaccinated children under one year of age, 87 between the ages of one and five, and 241 between the ages of five and ten. This makes a total of 338 vaccinated cases under ten years of age. Dr. Gayton, in an account of 10,403 cases of smallpox in his "Value of Vaccination," displays 20 vaccinated cases under one, 341 between one and five, and 945 between five and ten—a total of 1,306 vaccinated cases under ten years of age.

Vaccination does not even save from death from smallpox. The Registrar-General records 3,901 vaccinated smallpox deaths between the years 1881 and 1910, and if to these be added those recorded as having "No Statement" regarding vaccination, the grand total of 15,205 vaccinated deaths in those 30 years is reached.

If it be suggested that vaccination within ten years of attack may save from death from smallpox, the records again show that this is not the case. In 1870-72 the Metropolitan Asylums Board recorded the deaths of 38 vaccinated children under five years of age and 90 from five to ten years of age. Berlin in 1871-72 recorded 136 deaths from smallpox in vaccinated children under one year of age.

Statement: "Since vaccination was introduced, smallpox has almost died out, though at one time it was a pestilence."

Reply: One of the most fatal epidemics of smallpox on record occurred in 1871-72, when, according to an official witness before the Select Committee which sat to inquire into the Vaccination Act of 1867, 97½ per cent. of the population over two years of age and under 50 had either had smallpox or been vaccinated. When the country was best vaccinated it had most smallpox. As vaccination has been gradually discarded, smallpox has died out. An examination of the Reports of the Registrar-General show that it cannot have been vaccination that has stamped out smallpox. Vaccination was made compulsory in 1853 and during the decade 1851-60 41,939 persons died from smallpox. During the next decade the deaths were 34,212, a very high number seeing that the population was fairly well vaccinated. The next decade (1871-80) was the best vaccinated period in our history and the worst as regards smallpox, for there perished in those ten years 57,046 persons. In 1875 the great Public Health Act was passed and smallpox gradually began to grow less prevalent. During the 10 years 1881-90, 12,279 persons died of smallpox. That period was still a time of much vaccination. Between 1891 and 1898 vaccination declined enormously, rising again in 1899 and 1900 in consequence of the Vaccination Act, 1898. During the decade 1891-1900, 4,058 persons died of smallpox. More vaccination was practised between 1901 and 1907 and we had minor outbreaks of smallpox in most of our large towns in the years between 1901 and 1906. The smallpox deaths for the period 1901-1910 were slightly more than during the previous decade, being 4,286. On the passing of the Act of 1907 vaccination declined enormously, and the smallpox deaths for the decade 1911-1920 dropped to the unprecedented figure of 140. Small wonder that Dr. Louis Parkes, Chairman of the Royal Sanitary Institute Council, in a lecture at the Institute on 25th September, 1922, declared that it could not have been vaccination that had caused the decline of smallpox.

ANSWERS

TO

DR. KEEN'S LETTER

In The Times, July 7th, 1923,

By the SECRETARY OF THE NATIONAL ANTI-VACCINATION LEAGUE.

"The epidemic of smallpox in Gloucester and elsewhere is a tragedy. The neglect of vaccination is responsible for the sickness and deaths which may follow; for the disturbance of the trade of the city and for the cost to the ratepayers."

Dr. Keen is right and wrong. Had Gloucester been a well-vaccinated city, the Ministry of Health would not have published in every newspaper the fact that Gloucester had cases of smallpox. This would have been hushed up. But because the people of Gloucester refuse to be vaccinated, a mild infectious disease which has caused only two deaths in some 400 cases is noised abroad as a shocking epidemic and every effort is made by the authorities in London to ruin the trade of the town.

The outbreak itself is no tragedy. Of the first 150 cases, only six went to bed at all, and the matron has circulated a letter to the Press in which she has stated that only two of those six were in bed for symptoms connected with the disease for which they were sent to the hospital. She was so furiously angry at the false statements made as to the seriousness of the cases in hospital that she resigned her post. She personally examined 144 of the first cases, and there was not one serious case among them, and most of them were not ill at all.

An Unvaccinated Country Without Smallpox AUSTRALIA

(By A. W. Hyde of Brunswick, Victoria, in the Melbourne Herald of July 1, 1923.)

Many people feel alarmed because vaccination has fallen to so low an ebb in Victoria. Of 35,000 Victorian children who were born in 1921 only 3,000 were vaccinated.

Such timorous folk, perhaps, forget that Victoria is the only State of Australia where vaccination has been enforced for many years past. Taking the whole 134 years of Australian history, not one-fifth of the children born have been vaccinated. From 1851 to 1910 was the high-water period of vaccination, but even of the children born in that time (as Dr. Cumpston shows in his History of Smallpox in Australia) 2,928,233, or nearly three-fourths were never vaccinated.

No other country—since vaccination was first introduced to the world by Jenner—has experimented in non-vaccination on so enormous a scale.

Physicians of the old school, who held the value of vaccination higher than those of today, used to predict that in such circumstances smallpox would rage through the land. Dr. Cumpston's book contains many such terrifying suggestions of long ago.

Yet the result happily has been that of all countries in the world Australia has been the most free from smallpox. For the past fifty years no Australian child under five has died of smallpox, though about thirty years ago an infant died in Tasmania. In the whole of our history only three Australian children have died of this disease.

Of the people of Australia three-fourths have always been of the never-vaccinated class. If the modern theory that vaccination protects only for five years is correct, then, of course the number of protected persons has

BEHIND PRISON BARS

FOR CONSCIENCE SAKE

Why I Refused to Pay the Fine Imposed by Court

A Protest Against Medical Tyranny

By Louis S. Siegfried

"Siegfried, you have sounded the death knell of compulsory vaccination," said my friend to me as my period of detention ended, and I could again breathe the air of freedom. In that moment I felt keenly that the little sacrifice of my liberty that had been given me as an alternative when I refused to admit being guilty of something I had not committed by paying my fine, was indeed too small a price to pay.

Many people, prior to my trial, had told me I was a fool to engage in a battle that was certain to result in defeat for me. Was I not challenging the most formidable combination in the history of America—in the world's history? What chance had I to cope with such an adversary as had hounded many a brilliant man into something worse than obscurity?

I have rested happy in the thought that I do not stand alone in this fight for bodily liberty. Thousands of people have been awakened to the issue of vaccination. The spark has been set to a fire that will reduce medical tyranny to ashes.

The Court scene and what took place there on December 15, 1926 will for ever live in my memory. One of the greatest thrills of my career was realized when I was privileged to say to Judge Steers: "Your Honor, as a protest against the unfair, discriminatory law of compulsory vaccination, I refuse to pay the fine imposed by the Court, and prefer to go to jail." What followed is history now. I served my sentence. It was an invaluable experience which I hope will redound to the good of the cause.

My jail sentence eased a depression that existed in my mind for a long period. I profoundly regret that at one time I begged the issue of vaccination. Now I stand squarely and openly in bold defiance of it. After two medical experts of the Department of Health had testified that my little daughter Belema had never been contaminated by the vile pus of vaccination—though of course, the medical experts did not express themselves in just these words—I thanked God that she had escaped, and that she would escape as long as I was her guardian, and as long as I could defend her with my life against the unscrupulous pus dispensers and vaccinators.

WELL DONE HALEDON CHAPTER

The Officers and Members of Haledon Chapter of the International Anti-Vaccination League, are deserving of all kinds of credit for the splendid fight they made against compulsory vaccination as a condition of attending the public schools of their community. Through the superb and courageous efforts of Haledon Chapter, the Board of Education rescinded the motion which compelled children to be vaccinated. Other places should follow Haledon's example and put the clamps on the machinations of vaccinationists.

THE CASE AGAINST VACCINATION.

The case against compulsory smallpox vaccination is apparently being strengthened every day, and something approaching agitation in orthodox medical circles is noticed as a result of the action of the Chicago City Council in making vaccination optional after years of compulsion. Now comes Laura C. Little, the woman who forced the Chicago action, in a campaign to make vaccination optional through the whole of the United States. Her article relative to vaccination appears elsewhere on this page.

Mrs. Little cites statistics of England that are staggering. They are taken from the English Registrar General's records, and show that smallpox in Britain during the ten years, 1912-1921, during which vaccination was largely neglected, dropped to 122 deaths, as compared with the years between 1872-1901, when deaths were 46,312. Sanitation, not vaccination, has been the reason for the precipitate dropping off, Mrs. Little claims.

Vaccination is compulsory in most of the communities of the United States, although there is a growing sentiment against the practice. Mrs. Little's figures would seem to verify the protestants against municipal laws. It is high time that a thorough study be made of the whole question and that vaccination be made optional with the individual American statistics bear out those noted in England. There is no use subjecting the entire population to vaccination sores and other risks if there is no real reason. America is not China, where filth and lack of sanitation meet the eye at every turn. What may be necessary for one country may be absolutely unnecessary in another. The question should be settled by the medical profession and by

COMMENT ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS

LAURA C. LITTLE, THE COMING GREAT EMANCIPATOR.

(Dr. Tilden's Health Review and Critique.)
Mrs. Little has made vaccination optional in the great city of Chicago. If she is properly supported, as she deserves to be, she will make it optional in the United States in a very short time. Those who are open-minded and who believe in "health first" should give her support.

The following is a hot shot aimed at those who take it for granted that what they think they know must be true without even investigating. It is a part of an open letter which speaks for itself:

Professor H. B. Ward, Department of Zoology; Professor F. W. Tanner, Department of Bacteriology; Professor W. C. Rose, Department of Physical Chemistry; University of Illinois, Urbana, Ill.

Gentlemen:
You and each of you were quoted by the Daily Illini of February 18, 1924, as having "denounced anti-vaccinationists and anti-vaccination literature," and as being "unanimous in the opinion 'that vaccination is unquestionably successful.'"

You are represented as charging "that people arguing against vaccination made misstatements of fact, often misrepresented statements from reputable sources, and often took their statistics from disreputable authorities."

One of you quoted the Philippines experience as proving that vaccination prevents smallpox.

One stated, "People who distribute anti-vaccination literature are either misguided or ignorant. Those who write this literature do not know what they are talking about." The same statement was repeated by another of you.

The undersigned begs to say, in view of the foregoing, that the entire history of vaccination is manifestly a closed book to you; that you are accepting a carefully guarded tradition, instead of open-mindedly reading and informing yourselves. Not to follow your example and make unsubstantiated assertions, I beg to ask:

Do you know that England, the land of Jenner, after a century of trial of vaccination and half a century of compulsory vaccination, changed her law to optional vaccination? This fact should give you pause and invite study.

Do you know that this was not done until a Royal Commission had reported, after an investigation running over eight years, in which the leading experts of Europe and America had testified? Do you know that such a mass of damaging testimony was offered that this commission (consisting of its members "believing in vaccination") would not do other than recommend Parliament to relax the law?

Do you know that, once this was done, vaccination began to fall off and that, as vaccination declined, smallpox declined? Kindly study the following table, whose figures can be verified by going to the English Registrar General's records.

"Health" Doctor Seeks to Victimize Editor and the World

The Chicago City Council record herewith is photographically reproduced from the Council's official journal. Please read the proceedings and the ordinance. Then turn over the sheet and read the bold attempt of a medical health commissioner to use the Editor of an Eastern daily to start on its travels that fleetest of all things—a LIE.

Then do not marvel that the American Medical Liberty League demands Engineers instead of Doctors as health officials. Weak medical men find the temptation to falsify in the interest of their profession (or themselves) irresistible. Records of health offices abound in premeditated falsehood. The press is continually and purposely misled by medical health officers.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

Creation of a Board of Health for the City of Chicago.

The Committee on Public Health, to whom had been recommitted (July 15, 1924, pages 3679-80) an ordinance providing for the creation of a Board of Health for the City of Chicago, submitted a report recommending the passage of said ordinance as amended by said committee.

Alderman Nelson moved to concur in said report and to pass said ordinance.

No request being made by any two Aldermen present to defer consideration of said report for final action thereon until the next regular meeting, and the question being put, the vote thereon was as follows:

Yeas—Coughlin, Anderson, Jackson, Cronson, Eaton, Guernsey, Woodhull, Meyering, Givier, Cross, Wilson, Kunstmann, McDonough, O'Toole, Byrne, Moran, Barbee, McKinlay, Dick, D. A. Horan, Cepak, Toman, Arvey, Toubhy, Maypole, A. J. Alderman Woodhull moved to reconsider the foregoing vote.

The motion to reconsider was lost.

AN ORDINANCE

Amending Sections 1781 and 1783 of The Chicago Municipal Code of 1922.

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Chicago:

SECTION 1. That Sections 1781 and 1783 of The Chicago Municipal Code of 1922 be and the same are hereby amended to read respectively as follows:

"1781. Board of Health—Power to Make Rules and Regulations—Epidemics—Regulations Concerning.) There is hereby created and established a board of health for the City of Chicago which shall consist of five members, who shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the approval of the City Council, two of whom shall be appointed for the term of three years, two of whom for the term of two years, and one of whom for the term of one year, from the first day of January, 1926. Thereafter, at the expiration of the term of any member of said board, his successor shall be appointed in like manner, and all persons thus appointed, and their successors, shall hold office for the term of three years from the first day of January last past. Any vacancy that may occur in the membership of said Board of Health shall be filled through appointment by the Mayor, with the approval of the City Council, for the unexpired term.

All members of the Board shall serve without compensation.

The Board of Health shall elect annually, from its own members, a president, and such other officers as the Board shall determine by its rules.

Such board of health shall have power to make such rules and regulations in relation to the sanitary condition of the city and for the prevention and suppression of disease, not inconsistent with the provisions of this chapter, as it may deem necessary or advisable. Such rules or regulations shall take effect and be in force ten days after publication in the official newspaper of the city except in cases of emergency as hereinafter provided for. In case of contagious or epidemic disease or of danger from anticipated or impending contagious or epidemic disease, or in case the sanitary condition of the city shall be of such a character as to warrant it, it shall be the duty of the said board of health to make such rules and regulations and to take such measures and to do and order to be done and cause to be done such acts for the preservation of the public health (though not herein or elsewhere or otherwise authorized) as it may in good faith believe and declare the public safety and health demand, and all such rules and regulations so declared by the said board of health to be emergency rules and regulations shall take effect immediately, but as soon as may be after the promulgation of the same, the said emergency rules and regulations shall also be published, with notice that they are in force in the City of Chicago.

The Board of Health shall pass no rule or regulation which will compel any person to submit to vaccination, or injection of any virus, or medication, against his will or without his consent, or in case of a minor or other person under disability, the consent of his or her parent, guardian, or conservator, and nothing in this ordinance contained, or in any other ordinance heretofore passed and in force in this city, shall be construed to authorize or empower any person or

[Excerpt from Vol. XLVIII., No. 4 (1927) of the Journal of The Royal Sanitary Institute.]

The Case Against Vaccination, by Councillor W. ASBURY, Chairman, Health Committee, Sheffield City Council.

I DESIRE to state at the outset that the views expressed herein are my own, and in no sense commit any of my colleagues on the Sheffield City Council.

In order to understand the vaccination question it is necessary to devote a little time to the history of vaccination.

Jenner introduced the operation to the world in 1798. For the previous fifty years the practice of small-pox inoculation had been general and by its means small-pox had been spread to such an extent that medical men were at their wits' end to know what to do. Seventeenth century small-pox had been bad, but eighteenth century small-pox was worse. It has been calculated that from 1721 to 1758 small-pox inoculation was responsible for the deaths of no less than 22,700 persons from small-pox in London alone. It is not, therefore, surprising that when Jenner proposed that small-pox inoculation should be given up and cow-pox inoculation substituted for it, thus covering the retreat of the profession from an untenable position, his ideas were accepted by all whose interests were not inseparably bound up with the older form of treatment. Jenner asserted that by using cow-pox matter lifelong protection against small-pox would be obtained, and that without the slightest danger to the life of the person submitting to the operation. Experience proved that both these extravagant claims were false.

The original cow-pox used by Jenner was a filthy disease with loathsome characteristics. Fortunately or unfortunately his strain of the disease died out very quickly, and if it had not been for two London doctors, Woodville and Pearson, it is doubtful if anything more would have been heard of the matter. These two doctors obtained strains of mild cow-pox and by accidentally contaminating it with small-pox at the Small-pox Hospital propagated a strain of lymph that was very much milder than that used by Jenner, though even their attenuated virus produced ulcers in some of the persons vaccinated with it.

Don't fail to read M.C.

WHY DOCTORS VACCINATE.

NATIONAL ANTI-VACCINATION LEAGUE
ANNUAL MEETING, 26th MAY, 1927.

The Chairman, Mr. Arnold Lupton, made the following statement :

HISTORY OF VACCINATION UP-TO-DATE.

It is now about 120 years since vaccination as a preventive of smallpox was introduced. Jenner, whose name is associated with the process, had great difficulty in preparing a vaccine (the name comes from vacca, Latin for cow), which could be used without causing serious and obvious injury to the person vaccinated, and spent months in a vain attempt. The vaccine he recommended was derived from matter taken from the heel of a horse which had the nasty disease called "Grease." The London doctors, however, tired of waiting, produced a "vaccine" of their own which was subsequently used. Some people say that this vaccine was produced from cowpox and others that it was produced from smallpox, two entirely different diseases. Cowpox was a syphilitic disease that appeared on the teats of some milking cows and which when inoculated into the human being produced symptoms similar to syphilis. Smallpox was comparatively a harmless ailment which in many cases improved the health of the people subjected to it. The exact mixture of this "vaccine" will never be known because the doctors hit upon the ingenious plan of taking vaccine matter from sores produced by vaccination on a human body and in this way they got a continuous supply. Sometimes the illness produced by vaccination was slight and the recovery was rapid, in other cases serious injury and death resulted. It did not prevent smallpox, it was thoroughly tested by medical men of the period and found to be a failure from the point of view of the person vaccinated.

GREAT PROFESSIONAL SUCCESS.

From a professional point of view it was a great success. This vaccination could be applied to every person old or young. In that respect it resembled the system of inoculating smallpox (to prevent a natural attack, which failed utterly) which it superseded, but it had this advantage over the inoculation plan, that it did not produce a crop of smallpox cases in the locality where the person had been inoculated, and so it rapidly superseded inoculation, which in 1840 was made illegal, punishable by fine or imprisonment.

PROFITS OF VACCINATION.

The advocates of vaccination calculated in this fashion. The population of England and Wales, then about 10 millions, might all be vaccinated, and at 5s. a head that was equivalent to £2,500,000, but persons of high degree might be charged a guinea or more for the operation, whereas except for some such prophylactic the medical men could only get a living by treating that percentage of the population which happened to be ill and was willing to pay them for attendance.

Vaccination was voluntary and people who took it and suffered from it had no particular motive for publishing the evil results, and the medical profession had obviously nothing to gain by crying stinking fish. Jenner was an exceedingly clever propagandist and soon satisfied the great majority of the medical profession that vaccination was a very profitable business, his cry "once vaccinated always safe from smallpox" was effective, and when, as often happened, vaccinated people took smallpox he said they had been vaccinated with spurious lymph.

Laconia, N. H., September, 1929.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

"Our children were entered in school, as usual, near the first of September, 1927.

"Late in October, after they had been attending school six weeks or so, notices were sent us, saying that after November first the children would not be allowed to attend school unless we complied with the law regarding vaccination. Soon after this notice was received, the school nurse came to our homes, urging that we have our children vaccinated. When she learned that we did not intend to do so, she said then we should get certificates excusing them until warm weather, as it was 'late in the season to vaccinate'. We did not get these certificates, at once.

"On November first, the children were all sent home. So, after some deliberation we decided to go to the city doctor for certificates; as there seemed no other way to get the children back in school. The certificates were finally secured and the children were again entered in school. The doctor stated, however, that after the first of May, 1929, no more certificates would be accepted by the Board of Health.

April, 1929.

The following manifesto has been signed by seven registered doctors and six other supporters of the National Anti-Vaccination League, including a deputy chairman of Quarter Sessions, a noted actor, and an Alderman and ex-Mayor of the City of Birmingham.

MANIFESTO ON THE FRENCH VACCINATION REGULATIONS.

Whatever may have been thought of the efficacy of vaccination until recently, the evidence of its dangers, which so impressed the Dutch Government that they have suspended their compulsory law for the last two years, has lately become so overwhelming in this country that an increasing number of pro-vaccinist medical men are hesitating to advise the operation.

The opinion is growing that the disease of smallpox is preferable to the effects of vaccination. The association of vaccination with acute inflammation of the nervous system is no longer a matter of dispute. The full extent of this is impossible to estimate for as Professor McIntosh, who was one of the first doctors to demonstrate the connection between vaccination and sleepy sickness has asked, who knows how long the virus may remain dormant. Moreover, as Dr. Gordon Ward stated in the Medical World recently:—

"The Ministry hears nothing of the transient ocular palsies, the rather sleepy influenzas, inexplicable neuritis, and ill-defined debilities," which he suggests may be symptoms of encephalitis caused by vaccination. He adds that it has been shown

"quite clearly that the side results of viruses which generalise in the brain may be such that only occasionally are they identified for what they are. Also they may be very serious, e.g., radical change of temperament."

In spite of this there were notified in 1924, 6,296 cases of acute inflammation of the nervous system including 5,039 cases of encephalitis lethargica (sleepy sickness), over three times the recorded average for the previous nine years. But as in 1923, nearly double the previous four year's average number of vaccination tubes were issued it is difficult to escape the conclusion that this increase was directly attributable to vaccination.

No wonder Dr. McNulty told the Congress of the Royal Sanitary Institute in 1927 that all these acute cerebro-spinal diseases are on the increase; in fact "they are taking the place of the old epidemics."

The accumulation of such facts as these led Dr. Jameson to ask in The Lancet, August 18th, 1928, what was

"their justification for risking children's lives by vaccination as a protection against a disease which does not imperil their lives."

He adds that "it is a mere question of time before the persons responsible for the vaccination of those children who die of post-vaccinal encephalitis will be considered by some as guilty of constructive murder."

We have to remember, in addition, that vaccination is responsible for a host of other diseases, described in orthodox text-books, and that, in spite of the fact that vaccination is seldom mentioned on the death certificate, the figures of the Registrar-General for England and Wales show that 232 children under five years of age died from the effects of vaccination in the 24 years ending December 1928, while in the same period only 88 died of smallpox.

A special danger of the French regulation lies in the fact that while no doctor would vaccinate a person if he were not in sound health, it is now proposed that whenever anyone wishes to travel in France he should be vaccinated within two months of each visit, irrespective of his physical condition.

A well-vaccinated country like France has surely no need for fear infection from any unvaccinated traveller even if, as is implied by the order, the protection lasts only two months, for the French can get themselves cowpoxed every two months if they so desire.

The greatest evidence of the failure of vaccination is provided by the Report of the Health Organisation of the League of Nations, published in July, 1928. This shows that the least vaccinated countries, England and Wales and Switzerland, instead of being the danger spots as regards smallpox that they are represented to be had the fewest deaths from this disease during the nine years 1919-1927.

The official records of most countries prove that vaccinated and re-vaccinated persons take smallpox and die of that disease. The great smallpox pandemic of 1871-2 demonstrated the folly of relying on vaccination to control smallpox.

Although England has never imposed any vaccination regulations on those entering the country, she is one of the least afflicted by fatal smallpox, for the history of her own epidemics has taught her, time and time again, to rely upon isolation and ordinary sanitary measures for the control of this disease.

DEAR SIR (OR MADAM),

The Council find themselves once again compelled to bring to your notice the League's urgent need for funds. In order to maintain the work at its present level this year at least £500 is needed, over and above the general subscriptions.

Recent developments in the vaccination controversy have made it most vitally important that there shall be no slackening of any of our activities at the present moment. The Parliament elected last May contained the largest proportion of supporters of our cause of any Parliament hitherto elected, but it is not sufficient that M.P.s should sympathise with our aims: they must be constantly reminded of their duty in this matter and of the urgency of our particular question. The deputation organised by the Council last July that waited on the Minister of Health made a very considerable impression on that gentleman, but resistance on the part of his colleague and of the permanent medical officials appears to have lessened his willingness to deal with the matter. It is clear that only by constant pressure will anything be done.

The administration of the vaccination laws has been taken over by Councils—County Councils, Town Councils and Borough Councils—and the members of these bodies will need much education as regards the anti-vaccination point of view. As there are many thousands of these elected persons, it is obvious that considerable sums of money will be required in order to make an impression.

The Press, too, needs constant attention.

The question of office accommodation has become very acute. Not only is it unhealthy to work in the present overcrowded office, the work is hampered on account of the difficulty of keeping literature, books, papers, official reports, etc., in proper order. The lack of funds which causes shortness of staff imposes too heavy a burden on the Secretary, who frequently works 10 and even 12 hours a day, trying to cope with the mass of things that pour in from all quarters. Large numbers of supporters of our cause give nothing for the upkeep of the movement and yet expect the League to take action whenever called on to do so. If those who ask for help or advice would only give a small annual contribution, much of the League's financial trouble would be solved.

From the Annual Report, which we hope to send to all members of the League by the end of this month, it will be seen how multifarious the activities of the League have been during the past year. If those who appreciate the work done would send as large a contribution to the Special Fund as they can spare, the Council would be very grateful.

Yours faithfully,

ISABEL MARGESSON, President.

J. C. SWINBURNE-HANHAM, Treasurer.

VACCINATION RESEARCH ASSOCIATION
PROTESTS COMMERCIALISM
OF HEALTH COMMISSIONER WYNNE.

September 15, 1930

Hon. James J. Walker,
Executive Chamber,
City Hall,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Much newspaper space and comment has been made in connection with the reported charge that Martin J. Healy has been receiving $200 a month from the American Book Co. while an employee of the city.

Were a searching inquiry made into other departments we venture to say that many other public servants supposedly working for the city only, are making capital out of their jobs with additional incomes.

It is reported that the Health Commissioner of New York City, Dr. Shirley Wynne, receives $3,000 a year from the Milbank Foundation.

It would be interesting to know how much our Health Commissioner is receiving from his recent endorsement of Colgate's toothpaste featured by ads. Is this the duty for a Health Commissioner while in office? We protest the use of a high public office for exploitation.

Dr. Wynne has used public funds to place himself in the limelight. Innocent newspaper editors were lead to believe that the frantic toxin-antitoxin campaign was purely altruistic—to save the dear children. Time has proven it commercial.

The Bronx County Medical Society in its Bulletin recently resented the extent to which this toxin-antitoxin campaign was pushed. Dr. Wynne in the Weekly Bulletin of New York City, Dept. of Health, July 19, 1930, answering the Bronx County Medical Society, stated: "The plan followed by the Dept. of Health should evoke nothing but commendation. It provides a simple, inexpensive, effective and entirely ethical method whereby the general practitioner can secure additional practice."¹

The Dept. of Health in the past years has been notorious by its many grafters. While investigations are going on, would it not be a good idea to put the spotlight of investigation to our commercialized Health Dept.?

Very truly yours,

VACCINATION RESEARCH ASSN.

ADDRESS BY MR. SIMMS

OPPOSING MEASURE TO REQUIRE IMMUNIZATION AGAINST DIPHTHERIA

(NOTE:—In less than five minutes after Mr. Earl E. Simms delivered the address reprinted below before the Austin, Texas School Board the board reached a unanimous decision not to pass the proposed measure to require inoculation against diphtheria for admission to the public schools.

The address is of special significance wherever similar attempts are made in other cities or states because of its thoroughness and its high moral tone. Also many of the arguments used by Mr. Simms would apply with equal force to any other form of compulsory medication which might be proposed.—Citizens Medical Reference Bureau, Inc.)

The President and Members of the Austin School Board,
Ladies and Gentlemen of the Board,

Upon your table at this time you have a petition, signed by approximately one thousand representative citizens of this city, wherein you are requested not to pass that certain measure, now pending before your body, whereby inoculation with diphtheria serum will be made compulsory before children under six years of age will be allowed to enter the Austin public schools.

I am appearing before you as the representative of these petitioners and many more citizens of this community who are opposed to compulsory measures of this type. Let it be understood that this petition does not come from any organization or particular group of people but originated with citizens who met together in an effort to defeat the passage of the measure. The petition is signed, for the most part, by parents of school children; lawyers, bankers, doctors, ministers, merchants, business men, and women. A great many of these people have had their children inoculated with diphtheria serum, but they are strongly opposed to a law which would compel them to do such a thing. Interested citizens who circulated the petition report back that with only slight effort at least five or six thousand protestants could be secured, showing that this type of legislation is very unpopular. The objection is not so much to the measure but to the "compulsory" feature.

NO EMERGENCY

It is clear that no emergency now exists or has existed that would make the passage of this measure either expedient or necessary. It is true that there was a slight scare in one of our schools last year but surely not enough to justify any wholesale action as this measure provides. Then, too, it must be remembered that efforts have been made for the past several years by some health officials to have a measure such as this one adopted. Several years ago, the matter was presented to the Austin Chamber of Commerce but no action was taken because of the controversial nature of the question: This last point is made to show, that no happening within the last 24 months is the direct reason for bringing up this matter. It has been in the thought of those interested for 3 years or more. According to available records no other city in Texas has such a law, indicating that cities much larger than Austin, where the showing of diphtheria is much greater, do not consider such a law either advisable or necessary.

PERSONAL RIGHTS AND FREEDOM

There is one thing above all else that the people of America cherish, that is their liberty and freedom. And freedom of personal action means more

THE FOUR WHITED SEPULCHRES

Anti-Typhoid Virus Anti-Rabic Virus Smallpox Virus
Diphtheria Anti-Toxin

Deluded Humanity!

How Long Wilt Thou Submit to Thine Own Destruction?

HOW DIPHTHERIA ANTI-TOXIN IS MADE

A horse is prepared for this by a course of gradual poisoning with the throat excretion of patients who are sick with diphtheria. A little of this poison is administered at the first injection into the horse, but day by day the dose is increased till the limit is reached—that is, until the horse is diseased, sick, and almost ready to fall from weakness, then the blood tappings begin.

To obtain this blood the animal's head is stoutly, often painfully, secured; then two men attached to the laboratory select a point in the left side of the horse's neck immediately over a large blood vessel, and suddenly a sharp-pointed half-inch tube, some twelve inches long, is driven BY MAIN FORCE into the horse's neck. The animal shudders and trembles, but in his fear submits; his breathing is short and quick. The first plunge (if successful) enters the blood vessel, and a stream of warm blood flows through the tube into a bucket or glass jar. The amount of blood taken is from two to three gallons, and the process is repeated weekly until the horse is exhausted, then the animal is usually sold into a different kind of misery. The Truth Teller tells of a poor horse costing only twenty-five dollars who has had eight quarts of blood drawn from him every week for the last four years, having earned $75,000 in that short time.

Here follows a sworn statement secured by the New York Anti-Vivisection Society from a former employee of the Rockefeller Institute:

"If Dr. Jobling or Dr. Flexner came near the horses they would prick up their ears and move back and forth, and seem to be afraid of them. They used the twitch, which is a cruel thing they use on the upper lip to keep them still. Horses would rather stand the bleeding patiently than have the twitch.

"Horses suffered a great deal after the inoculations. First, the horse was inoculated; two weeks later after inoculation he was bled; about two weeks after bleeding he was again inoculated, then it would swell on the shoulder where he had been inoculated, and a lump would form, and the swelling would subside; afterwards the lump would burst, and then there would be an open ulcer with the pus running down in a steady stream, all the time, for about a week. That occurs with every horse they inoculate for serum.

"The horses were in such a pain that they would stand for hours without moving, and when they did move they would utter sounds I cannot describe; I can hear them yet; I can never forget them; they were indescribable."

Anti-toxin has caused many serious affections of the skin and vital organs, and sometimes will cause sudden death. The public has been cruelly misled and is being cruelly exploited by those commercially interested; it must not be overlooked that many physicians receive a large commission from the money paid by the patient for the anti-toxin! We continually read that inoculations are free to soldiers and in schools. This is a delusion culpably fostered. Serums and vaccines are always paid for by the City, County, State, or Federal Government out of funds collected by the taxes on the people. So the people pay, and many $25.00 horses may be made to bring in colossal revenues.

How Cleveland Stamped Out Smallpox Without Vaccination.

FACTS FOR THOUGHTFUL CITIZENS.

Within the past year the country has been given an object lesson on the subject of smallpox and vaccination, of which every citizen should know, and on which every physician should ponder. It is the history of smallpox and vaccination in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, and demonstrates how, when vaccination failed, sanitation and disinfection succeeded. The facts are given in a letter from Dr. Martin Friedrich, Chief of the Cleveland Board of Health, to the editor of the Arena (April number), and tells how the work was accomplished. The following are extracts from the letter: —

"It affords me great pleasure to state that the house-to-house disinfection freed Cleveland from smallpox. Since Aug. 23, 1901, to this very hour of writing, not a single case has originated in this city, but seven cases were imported. The disease raged here uninterruptedly since 1898. We relied upon vaccination and quarantine as the most effective weapons to combat it, but in spite of all our efforts it doubled itself every year, and was in a fair way of repeating the record of last year, as in 1900 we had 993 cases, and from Jan. 1 to July 21, 1901, the number amounted to 1223. On this date I was called to take charge of the health office, with seventeen cases on hand. . . .

"Vaccination had given us many untoward symptoms. Frequently it did not "take" at all. One fourth of all cases developed sarsia instead of vaccinia. Some arms swelled clear down to the wrist joint, with pieces of flesh as big as a silver dollar, and twice as thick, dropping right out, leaving an ugly, suppurating wound, which to heal took in many cases over three months. Finally, four cases of tetanus developed after vaccination, so that the people became alarmed, and rightly so.

"I laid these facts before Mayor Johnson and proposed to stop vaccination entirely and instead of it disinfect thoroughly with formaldehyde. . . . I formed two squads of disinfectors, preferring medical students for the work. Each squad consisted of twenty men, with a regular sanitary patrolman at their head, and each man was provided with a formaldehyde generator. Thus equipped they started out to disinfect every section of the city where the disease had shown its head, and every house in this section, no matter if smallpox had been within or not, and every room, nook and corner of the house, special attention being paid to winter clothes that had been stored away, presumably laden with germs. . . . Along with this the regular sanitary police force was given orders to make a house-to-house canvass to tell the public to clean up their yards, barns and out-houses, and abate all nuisances that could be found. . . . It took over three months to do the work, but the result was most gratifying. . . . As a result Cleveland is now free from smallpox, and from the worst infected city it has become the cleanest."

Let it be remembered that the history of Cleveland, as given above, is not an isolated case. Another memorable example of the superiority of sanitation over vaccination is seen in the history of the town of Leicester, England, which in 1872 was thoroughly vaccinated (90 per cent. of births being thus treated) and badly scourged with smallpox. Warned by its experience, Leicester gradually established sanitary improvements and repudiated vaccination, and now she is the least vaccinated town in England (only 2 per cent. of births being vaccinated), and the freest from smallpox.

In striking contrast to the above, is the

"Successful" Vaccination Affords No Protection Against Small-pox

This woman who never wronged anyone in her life, who never had typhoid fever in her life,—and no attempt has been made to prove her guilty of having carried typhoid to others; has been fighting for her liberty in the Cook County Criminal Court for nearly a year. Yesterday—November 23, 1920—Judge Sabath quashed the writ of habeas corpus and remanded her to the custody of John Dill Robertson, health commissioner of Chicago.

If this decision is not contested, any person whom a health commissioner chooses to seize can be seized and held by him for life. Are you ready to agree to that, Mr. American Citizen? If not, the American Medical Liberty League will be glad to hear from you at its central office, 64 East VanBuren Street, Chicago.

In fact, the A. M. L. League proposes to defend the rights of the individual, as involved in this case, to the limit. The conditions are ideal and we are convinced that a decision will be rendered in the Supreme Court that will prove an effectual bar to similar proceedings in the future. Are you with us?

The Chicago Labor News printed Mrs. Barmore's story recently, as follows:

On the day this is written, Mrs. G. A. Barmore, living at 100 W. 113th place, called up, on the 'phone, to remind the office of the American Medical Liberty League of her pitiable plight. Her case may be taken as an illustration of the slavery to which medical scheming has reduced the City of Chicago, the State of Illinois and the country at large. So far as we yield to medical authority exerted through medical health officials—more properly named disease officials—that far are we slaves. And if we yield just once, in ever so small a personal matter, we are liable to find ourselves in their hands for an indefinite time and possibly for life. This is a case like that of the man in jail who was told by his lawyer, "Why, they can't put you in jail for THAT!" "But here I am," returned the man, "the problem is to get me out." Not so easy a matter that, as poor Mrs. Barmore can testify. Let me tell you her story with all possible brevity. There are so many ridiculous features in connection with the asinine performance of the medics and especially of the disease officials it will be difficult to cut it to the space required. It would be more entertaining, could full details be given.

For 7 years, up to last fall, this lady had supported herself and her disabled husband keeping boarders. She was strong and perfectly healthy, though 67 years of age. Her husband is 72. She was a fine housekeeper, industrious, thrifty, a good cook, and made an attractive home for her whole household.

A boarder who had injured his constitution with strong drink was taken sick, the doctor called (Sonnenfeld, 11349 Michigan avenue) named the disease a kidney trouble—parenchymatous nephritis. Taken to a hospital, the patient shortly died, being certified as dying of the same jaw-breaking disease. The body was shipped to Iowa and buried. Weeks later, some "laboratory" that had got hold of the man's excreta reported it had found the "typhoid germ." So, everybody revised—the doctor his diagnosis and death

THE GOING OF CUMMING

Paragraphs of Enlightenment on the Calf Pus Cult

X- RM 787.28

The State Board of Health of Mississippi has printed a tissue of falsehoods in its "Bulletin" for January, February, March and April. The heading is "The Smallpox Hazard," and the author is Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming of the United States Public Health Service. (Alas for the debasement of these noble words!)

Here are some of the falsehoods:

General Cumming calls vaccination a "life-saving process." As a matter of fact, vaccination is blood-poisoning and nothing less. Putting vaccine virus into the circulation necessarily poisons, the stuff itself being a morbid poison—see any good dictionary for the definition. See the sore, ulcer, destruction of tissue, for positive evidence that can not be gainsaid. There is, besides, a lasting taint, of which many who suffer from it are not aware of the source.

"Man may absolutely guarantee himself against smallpox by vaccination," says Dr. Cumming. On the contrary, in every epidemic in the last hundred years vaccinated persons have died. In some epidemics they have died by the tens of thousands. Every student of the subject knows that Germany lost over 100,000 vaccinated citizens in the smallpox epidemic of the early 1870's, knows, too, that Japan lost 48,000 with smallpox in the 20 years ending with 1908, and all were vaccinated. One who is up to date on vaccination knows of recent happenings in the Philippines. Those islands have been much vaccinated ever since the American occupation began, and finally in the years 1918 and 1919, 11,000,000 vaccinations were performed on a population of 10,000,000. The result was that in those two years there were 147,187 cases of smallpox and 63,973 deaths, the highest smallpox mortality in a great epidemic ever known in history.

The foregoing are all official figures. The Philippines item is of easy access to anybody. Is General Cumming ignorant of these facts? Certainly NOT.

He styles smallpox "one of the most destructive diseases that afflict the human race." There is ample testimony to the contrary. In little vaccinated countries like England and the United States, the smallpox death rate is low. Before vaccination was discovered, Dr. Sydenham (called the Father of English Medicine) said, "If no mischief be done by physician or nurse, smallpox is the lightest and safest of diseases." The British Royal Commission sets the death rate prior to the introduction of vaccination at 14 to 18 per cent.

Since vaccination came in to pollute and weaken, smallpox has frequently had a terrible mortality, as can be seen in the Philippines—figures above.

Again quoting Dr. Cumming: "During the long period which has elapsed since Jenner's day the value of the procedure has been established in every corner of the world."

That is not the truth without the qualifying statement that in many parts of the world the value of vaccination is today disputed and denied. Though the country of Jenner was fooled for awhile, the opposition grew and culminated in the appointment of a commission to investigate the subject and report to Parliament. If Dr. Cumming were honest and not trying to put something over, he would tell of the enactment of the Conscience Clause, which in effect repealed compulsory vaccination in Great Britain. He would state that this freedom was even extended to the Army during the World War, and an order to that effect was issued by Lord Kitchener.

If Dr. Cumming were not trying to make out a case regardless of the facts, he would tell of the experience of Leicester, England, where vaccination has fallen into disuse for more than 30 years. He would tell how the death rate of infants has fallen along with it. He would describe the Leicester method of fighting smallpox and show how it has proved not only more successful than vaccination but CHEAPER.

Indeed if Dr. Cumming had wanted to tell the truth he would have shown that in our own country vaccination has become so discredited that two States have passed laws prohibiting compulsory vaccination without reserve. He would have mentioned that similar laws are being fought for in many States, and that the tide of opposition to vaccination is rising fast.

Furthermore, instead of repeating vague generalities about the Kansas City smallpox and using them as an argument for vaccination, he would investigate and give the whole story to the world. Here are a few Kansas City facts he could easily discover, and they do not support the vaccination theories, either:

First. That the deaths with few exceptions occurred in the hospital.

Second. That all died under medical care.

Third. That the doctors experimented with a new serum treatment "from the

FATAL CASE of POST-VACCINAL ENCEPHALITIS

ENCEPHALITIS LETHARGICA

A little girl's sufferings

The Lancet for September 15th, 1928, published an account of the illness and death of K. S. Cordcau, a little girl, nine years of age, the daughter of a provision merchant of Streatham High Road, who, being in good health, was vaccinated on June 5th, 1928, during a totally unwarranted small-pox scare, and died at St. Thomas's Hospital on July 1st. Dr. A. E. Russell, M.D., B.Sc., F.R.C.P.Lond., Senior Physician, St. Thomas's Hospital, and Dr. R. Oddie, B.M., B.Ch.Oxf., House Physician to the Hospital, are the authors of the report on the case. They state that the exact relationship of the fatal illness to the preceding vaccination is very obscure. We would suggest that it always is obscure to medical men who have been taught that vaccination is a harmless process. However, Dr. Oddie certified that death was due to post-vaccinal encephalitis. These two doctors say they have observed other cases (presumably post-vaccinal encephalitis) but this has "special interest."

Here are some of the details of the case as given by the above-named doctors. Readers are recommended to buy The Lancet for September 15th, 1928, and study the facts as given there. Members of local authorities will perhaps not be so ready to pass resolutions against the Conscience Clause if they realise what vaccination can do to little children. For this is only one of many similar cases where the result of vaccination is death or insanity.

History of the Case.

"Apart from an attack of chicken-pox at the age of 7 years, this child's previous history was unimportant. She had not been previously vaccinated. Vaccination was performed by Dr. C. J. E. Edmonds on June 5th, and took a normal course. On June 12th she was sent home from school on account of headache and dizziness and she vomited once. The headache persisted, she became drowsy, and on the 15th vomited. Thereafter she was confined to bed. On the 16th her condition was unchanged, but the temperature rose to 102.5° F. and she vomited again. On the 17th her temperature rose to 105° F. Retention of urine occurred for the first time, and from that day onwards regular catheterisation was required.

She was seen by one of us (A. E. R.) on June 17th. She was then practically unconscious with a flushed face, pulse 128, pupils small and reacting to light. She could not be made to talk, but did put out her tongue when asked. Pharynx, heart, lungs, and abdomen were normal. Both knee-jerks were absent but there was an extensor response in the right big toe. The abdominal reflexes were absent. There was no retraction of neck and no rigidity of neck muscles. Temperature at 11 p.m. was 103° F.

Condition on Admission.—She was admitted into the hospital on the following day, June 18th. She was practically unconscious on admission but could just be roused and did murmur her name. Her eyes were half closed. No paralysis of ocular muscles was observed and the optic discs were normal. Tongue furred. Her pulse was rapid throughout, generally speaking between 120 and 140. Respirations varied from 24 to 40. No changes developed in the cardiovascular system, lungs, and gastro-intestinal system.

She remained in practically the same condition until her death. At the best she was profoundly lethargic when not absolutely comatose. At times, however, a slight glimmer of consciousness did return. She appeared, for instance, to recognise her parents and murmured "mother," and one day asked for a drink. Her position hardly varied from day to day. She never moved her legs at all and they were quite flaccid throughout. Her arms were slightly spastic, the left more so than the right. They were, as a rule, pressed across her chest, but if they were displaced she would slowly bring them back. Only on one or two occasions was there any indication of voluntary movement of arms. Her head was usually slightly inclined to the left, but there was no conjugate

Reasons for Abolishing the Compulsory Clauses of the Vaccination Act and Payment for Vaccination out of Public Funds.

1. Although exemption is allowed, compulsion is still retained. The presumption of the law remains in favour of compulsion.
2. The requirement that an objector to vaccination should make a declaration of his objection is unfair. Objectors should have complete freedom in this matter.
3. The limitation of the period for filing an objection to vaccination to four months from the birth of the child turns thousands of honest objectors into defaulters. Large numbers of parents from various causes (such as misreading of notices, one of which, Form Q, seems to have been designed to mislead; illness of mother or child; absence from home of the father; child born in a nursing home, and forms withheld, mislaid, or served at the wrong address; ignorance or illiteracy of the parents, etc.) fail to get exemption within the four months.
4. It is absurd that the parent of an unvaccinated child is a law-abiding citizen if he gets exemption from vaccination within four months of his child's birth, but a criminal if he fails to do so and still keeps the child unvaccinated. The child is equally unvaccinated whether the father gets exemption or not.
5. In many districts it is difficult to get exemption. Even when sitting in Court, magistrates have refused to take the declaration. Large numbers of magistrates all over the country flatly refuse to take these declarations away from the Court. Many treat applicants for their signatures with insult and contumely. Some who take the declaration lecture applicants on their "folly." To get the form signed, a great many parents have to lose a day's or half-a-day's work, and some travel as many as seventeen miles before they find a magistrate willing to sign.
6. Parents who fail to get exemption are liable to a fine and costs. There are usually two prosecutions and the probable amount they are called on to pay is £2 or more. Magistrates seem entirely ignorant of the law. They threaten defaulters with repeated penalties though these were abolished by the Act of 1898. Vaccination officers constantly inform parents who have failed to get exemption that they must have their children vaccinated or accept the alternative of repeated fines.

"Medics" Use Lindbergh

A Press Despatch of April 24, 1928, says: "Lindbergh in race with death . . . carries serum and three white mice . . ."

This means just one thing—The Rock-hearted Research Laboratories are broadcasting again—and what a program! The periodic drive is on, carrying its vicious slogan, "a serum for every ill."

The gullible public, ever eager for deeds of adventure and heroism, blindly applauds the little dramas staged in behalf of the Great Foundations. Who can forget the little epic of the Arctic—the movie dog-sled, the "hero" dog and the "life-saving dash" to Nome? And what more fitting at the present time than an airplane dash, and who more fitted to supply the heart interest than the Nation's newly acquired and beloved hero, Lindbergh?

The papers publish all this free advertising and the unthinking public is again blind to the propaganda behind these publicity stunts.

If the unfortunate victim of organized medical propaganda dies, the serum was not of the correct number—"should have been Number 23."

If he recovers, in spite of "science," the three white mice and the pus extract did the trick.

Rock-hearted Research Laboratories seem willing to risk any life, or any number of lives, to get publicity. They need it to keep their wheels of death turning to grind out white mice and pus extracts with which to pollute the Nation's minds and bodies, and, "incidentally," to enhance their wealth.

—GEORGE STARR WHITE, M.D.

Three white mice—
See how they fly—

They all fly northward to join the strife,
Waged on a "death-dealing germ" so rife—
Did ever you hear of such fraud in your life;
As three white mice?

Three white mice—
Why do they fly?

Why, to carry the serum that boosts the name,
Of a Research Lab. on the Wings of Fame—
Did ever you know of such "medical" shame;
As three white mice?

THE Council desire to bring to the notice of Anti-Vaccinists a very important work which has just been published in England and in America.

It is entitled "Béchamp or Pasteur?" and has been written by Miss E. Douglas Hume. It is based on a manuscript by Dr. M. R. Leverson, a worker in the Anti-Vaccination movement, well known in America and in England.

Workers in every medical reform movement (Anti-Vaccinists, Anti-Vivisectionists, unorthodox healers of every school of thought) and all humanitarians should possess themselves of this work, which shows clearly how large a part of modern medical teaching, in founding itself on the theories of Pasteur, is built on unsound foundations and has raised a superstructure of disastrous delusion.

Belief in Pasteur has led to much suffering both to men and animals. Had the theories of Professor Béchamp, whose ideas Pasteur purloined and perverted, received their right share of public attention and respect, the current craze for blood poisoning by inoculations could never have attained its present vogue, and untold suffering would have been spared to countless human beings and animals.

The work contains chapters on vaccination, typhoid inoculation, tetanus, anthrax, rabies, the silkworm disease, the diseases of vines, and other matters of interest to the student of Pasteur. It is written in easy flowing style and can be mastered by anyone possessed of ordinary intelligence.

In England the work can be obtained for six shillings, plus sixpence postage, from Messrs. Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent and Co., 4, Stationers' Hall Court, London, E.C.; through a bookseller; or from The National Anti-Vaccination League, 25 Denison House, 296, Vauxhall Bridge Road, London, S.W.1.

In America the work can be obtained for two dollars, plus postage, from Messrs. Covici McGhee, 158, West Washington Street, Chicago, Ill., or from Mrs. Lora C. Little, Secretary of the American Medical Liberty League, 59, East van Buren Street, Chicago, Ill.

An English supporter of the Anti-Vaccination cause has been responsible for the printing and publication of this important work, and the Council of the National Anti-Vaccination League earnestly hope that you will do your best to promote a wide circulation for the book.

Supported by believers in pure blood, healthy living, kindness to animals, and real progress to a better world, it will not only give its readers in our ranks much valuable help, but it will, we hope, convert others to our views.

Those receiving this circular, who have not yet purchased one or more copies, are earnestly requested to buy and circulate the book. An order form is enclosed.

THE KING'S ILLNESS.

Its Special Interest for Anti-Vaccinationists.

By

JOHN SHAW, M.D. (Lond.), M.R.C.S. (Eng.).

THE publicity given to the details of the recent illness of His Majesty the King is in the nature of a challenge to us who are opposed to vaccine-therapy; and the present occasion offers a fitting opportunity for accepting that challenge. Commenting on the authoritative statement issued by the King's doctors on 19th December last, the leading article in the "British Medical Journal" stated: "It is in keeping with the spirit of the age that this news, technical as it is, should have early and wide publicity."

Our Secretary, Miss Loat, has been asked very often whether the King was inoculated. The following facts will probably speak for themselves. Lord Dawson of Penn, who is presumably the acknowledged leader of the school of vaccine-therapy in this country, called in a bacteriologist immediately he diagnosed, on the second day of the illness (22nd November), some congestion in the right lung. The treatment, we learn officially, aimed at "raising immunity and promoting leucocytosis," that is to say, an increase of the white corpuscles of the blood, which are regarded as the sanitary scavengers of bacteria in the bloodstream. There appears, therefore, to be no doubt that the King was treated by vaccine-therapy.

Treatment was not confined, however, to the inoculation of bacterial products. It is specifically mentioned that "chemical antidotes" were also administered. This fact is practically an admission that vaccine-therapy was unequal to its task. The comments of the "Lancet" and "British Medical Journal" are but little eulogistic of bacteriological treatment. The "Lancet" (1st December) wrote: "Specific treatment is a useful aid, and may turn the fortunes of the day, but it cannot put the affection to sudden rout." In a similar strain, the "British Medical

THE PRESENT STATE —OF— TESTS AND SERUMS

By

ISAAC LOCKHART PEEBLES, M. D.
Meridian, Miss.

1. The Tuberculin Test and Cure for Tuberculosis.

The tuberculin test and cure for tuberculosis is worse than a failure in this, that after years of about 80 varieties as a test, it is now declared: "Tuberculin is a failure altogether, and more than a mere failure since it excites into destructive activity latent or inactive tuberculosis, and as a curative it has so completely failed that now, common sense exercise, rest, food, general hygiene are the remedies used." See Journal of the American Medical Association for Dec. 3, 1921, March 22, 1924 (pages 995-1005).

2. The Schick Test and the Antitoxin Cure for Diphtheria.

The Schick test is not only risky, but dangerous, for it causes tonsillitis, scarlet fever, diphtheria and even death; and hence an uncertainty and dangerous, although at times it reddens the skin, swells the skin, produces sores, and

IS BETTER HEALTH DUE TO THE DOCTORS?

BUYING BABIES BLOOD FOR SERUM

The Climax of Silly, Vicious, Vaccination

MEASLES has been included in the list of diseases which health departments are insisting shall be treated by serumization. With the development of the already long list of serum treatments, it looks as though within another quarter of a century, the physician will be forced out of practice, and his place taken by the mad bacteriologist. A couple of Chicago physicians and experimenters recently heralded the story that they were working on a general serum which would immunize the human body against all diseases. Just as soon as these wise men from the Windy City of the West succeed, we will be able to pay the price, get the jab, and forever after be immune to all diseases. If this comes to pass there cannot be any possible use for physicians, and the field will be left to a few surgeons, who, in order to live, will be compelled to multiply surgical needs, and when this is done, no organ of the human body will be exempt from surgical raids.

Before the days when bacteriology promulgated the germ and bug theory of the origin of disease, every dear old grandmother knew how to take good care of a case of measles. In those days we laughed at the disease, played marbles when it was on, never took any drugs for it, never missed a meal during the attack. But now, all the elements of a psychological dread has been attached to measles, and fear has made it a disease to be dreaded and to be treated with serums if our children would escape its "awful consequences," and outlive an attack.

The New York City health department has gone clean lunny over measles and its consequences, or rather it has gone lunny over vaccination and serumization. It must include measles in the list of diseases against which children may be immunized.

It is said that measles is very prone to lead to complications such as pneumonia, bronchitis, phthisis, and otitis media. This long tail of dreadful complications is a part of the species of mental intimidation associated with the sap-headism of serumization. Without it, everybody would laugh the thing out of existence rather than vaccinate it. The malady has even been nationalized, so that one might get "German" measles, a la Kaiser.

MEDICAL VIEWS ON VACCINATION.

NOTABLE CHANGES AND ADMISSIONS.

(All quotations in the following are from The Lancet,
The British Medical Journal, or The Medical World).

THE last three years have seen a very remarkable development, in the ranks of the medical profession, on the vaccination question.

It started with the Presidential Address to the Royal Society of Medicine by Professor Jas. McIntosh, Professor of Pathology at London University and Director of the Bland-Sutton Institute of Pathology at Middlesex Hospital, on October 19th, 1928, when Professor McIntosh declared in regard to vaccination against smallpox that :—

“Scientifically, it cannot be disputed that from every point of view the injection of virus capable of multiplying in the body of the individual is bad. When multiplication of the virus occurs, then there is no possibility of estimating the dose to which the patient has been subjected. Thus the effect cannot be controlled, and in susceptible individuals this may lead to unforeseen results.”

With reference to the suggestion that the mortality returns show that the risk of vaccination is negligible, Professor McIntosh said :—

“It can, of course, be argued on statistical grounds that the likelihood of bad effects after smallpox vaccination is infinitesimal and not worth consideration ; but is this really so ? It has recently been shown that nervous disabilities (meningo-encephalo-myelitis, etc.) may follow vaccination, either as a direct effect or as a sequel to the lowering of the general resistance of the body.”

Referring to the revival of the use of an attenuated living virus as a prophylactic in other diseases, Professor McIntosh expressed himself as rigorously opposed to this, adding :—

“Who knows for how long an attenuated bacillus can lie dormant and then assume its former virulence ? ”

Pasteur or Buisson ?

OR

The Pure and Kindly Vapor Bath.

WHICH SHALL WE FOLLOW?

Pasteur, having in his laboratory investigations, as a chemist, made sundry discoveries useful to wine growers for the prevention of fermentation, went on to devise a method of treatment for the cure of rabies.

A physician describes this system as one which "consists in inoculating usually wholly uncontaminated human beings with the most terrible virus known to science—to wit, that of hydrophobia;" and adds:

"The late M. Pasteur succeeded in producing a brand new form of hydrophobia,—'rage du laboratoire,'—never known to exist before."

Professor Peter, the greatest clinician France has produced this century—a man described as the Sir William Gull, of Paris—the able editor of the Medical Journal, writes: "M. Pasteur does not cure hydrophobia, he gives it."

Professor Peter also says:

"M. Pasteur has been obliged to propagate a belief in the frequency of hydrophobia. . . Now, hydrophobia in man is a very rare disease. I have only seen two cases in thirty-five years of hospital and civil practice; while my colleagues both in town and country, count the cases they have seen by units, and not by dozens (still less by hundreds)."

Another physician, Dr. Edward Berdoe, M. R. C. S., says:

"So far as any good effect having resulted from the treatment, we know that it has undoubtedly led to the increase of hystero-epilepsy, a disease singularly like hydrophobia."

Dr. Berdoe mentions having seen a dozen beautiful dogs who had been rendered artificially rabid as a necessary part of the regular treatment of the animals employed in the preparation of the virus;—"dogs who filled the air with their cries and shook the bars of their prisons in their efforts to escape."

Dr. T. M. Dolan, F. R. C. S., of Halifax, the erudite and independent Editor of the Provincial Medical Journal, in his admirable book, "Pasteur and Rabies," says:

"Not only does M. Pasteur not protect from disease, but he has added a new terror to it by the introduction of paralytic rabies."

LIVING VACCINE VIRUS DANGEROUS

THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH

CONDEMN VACCINATION AS NOW PRACTISED.

See The Lancet, The British Medical Journal, &c.

JAMES MCINTOSH, M.D., Professor of Pathology, University of London, and Director of the Bland-Sutton Institute of Pathology, Middlesex Hospital, gave a Presidential Address to the Section of Pathology of the Royal Society of Medicine on 19th October, 1926. This was reported in The Lancet of the 30th October, 1926. Dr. McIntosh, speaking of Vaccination, said: " . . . There is now only one human disease, i.e., smallpox, in which the injection of the living virus is still widely used to procure an immunity."

"Scientifically IT CANNOT BE DISPUTED THAT FROM EVERY POINT OF VIEW THE INJECTION OF VIRUS CAPABLE OF MULTIPLYING IN THE BODY OF THE INDIVIDUAL IS BAD." . . . "It may of course be argued on statistical grounds that the likelihood of bad effects after smallpox vaccination is infinitesimal and not worth consideration; BUT IS THIS REALLY SO? It has recently been shown that nervous disabilities (meningo-encephalo-myelitis, etc.) MAY FOLLOW VACCINATION, EITHER AS A DIRECT EFFECT OR AS A SEQUEL TO THE LOWERING OF THE GENERAL RESISTANCE OF THE BODY." . . . "Who knows for how long an attenuated bacillus can lie dormant and then assume its former VIRULENCE?"

Here we have an UNQUALIFIED CONDEMNATION by an expert authority who is not an anti-vaccinist of the present system of VACCINATION, by means of living virus, justifying the action of the anti-vaccinators who for the last 70 years have tried to teach the public the truth about vaccination, and its dangers.

The reader should particularly note the words in brackets in the above quotation, "meningo-encephalo-myelitis, etc." There is great virtue in the "etc." The anti-vaccinators know how many horrible diseases are included in those words. The reader is referred to our LEAFLET headed "ENCEPHALO-MYELITIS following Vaccination," which refers to an article in The Lancet of the 4th September, 1926,

The Bird that laid the Vaccination Egg.

X- RM 787, Z₈ By J. H. LEVY.

#14 Reprinted from "Politics and Disease," by the kind permission of
Mr. J. H. Levy and the Committee of the Personal Rights Association.

In the terrible indictment of "Popular Government" drawn up by Sir Henry Sumner Maine, one of his chief counts is an alleged lack of reverence of scientific authority manifested by the populace, a contumacy of the profane and vulgar crowd against the fiat of the physicist—backed up, of course, by the legislator and the judge, the policeman and jailer. There is, he says, "just enough evidence to show that even now there is a marked antagonism between democratic opinion and scientific truth as applied to human societies"; and he quotes with approval (while contending that the sarcasm is inadequate) one of Macaulay's "cock-sure" sentences, in which dissenters from "the immortal Jenner" are written down, in terse and unambiguous English, as fools, classed with the opponents of gas lighting and railroads, and even with "the fools of an age anterior to the dawn of history," who—thus occupying an antipodal position in time to that of the celebrated New Zealander—"doubtless opposed the introduction of the plough and alphabetical writing."* Complementary to this picture of anti-scientific folly, is that of the establishment of scientific truth drawn by Sir George Cornewall Lewis, who describes how "discoveries in medicine . . . which rest on a firm basis, as vaccination and the operation for aneurism, are after a few years brought to a certain test, and make their way in all countries. Pseudo-sciences, on the other hand, are not accredited by the consentient reception of professional judges, but remain in an equivocal and unaccepted state."†

Now let me say at once that to genuine science my allegiance is unbounded and unequivocal. It is necessarily authoritative; for the word "science" is simply Latin for "knowledge," and has come to mean systematized knowledge. To rebel against this is the sheerest imbecility, on the face of it. But when the matter in dispute is whether a given proposition or doctrine is true or false, to declaim against those who challenge it, as mutineers against science, is simply an audacious begging of the question. This is an old trick—if that can be called a trick which is mostly resorted to through persistency of bias and without any conscious effort to deceive. Priests have been very prone to denounce as enemies of religion all those who question their own particular theological conclusions; and physicists who regard this conduct from a lofty height of scientific contempt have not been slow to do the same sort of thing.

OUR ARMIES AND NAVIES AND VACCINATION--INOCULATION.

Our Brave Troops have to Fight
GERMANS IN FRANCE
and
GERM THEORISTS AT HOME.

A vast Army of more than four million brave men has volunteered to fight our Country's battles, and the Nation, regardless of expense, finds them food, clothing, shelter; weapons and ammunition, and also, to preserve their health, tries to make all proper sanitary arrangements so far as they are known to sanitary engineers.

All the men who join the Army are carefully examined to see that they are sound in every respect.

Unfortunately, for the health of the Army, and consequently for the success of our Military operations, the Medical Profession is dominated by advocates of absurd theories, who, as far as possible, insist upon Vaccination, Anti-typhoid and various other inoculations.

TURN OUT THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE

Because it Persists in Poisoning the People.

It authorises or permits its officials, Doctors and public bodies to send notices to school children, and parents, that unless vaccinated they will be Prosecuted.

All known methods of inoculation or vaccination against smallpox have now been Condemned by the Highest Medical Government Authorities.

The First method practised 150 years ago is now illegal, Punishable with Imprisonment.

The Second method started by Jenner in 1798 and practised for 100 years was Stopped by Act of Parliament in 1898 because it gave syphilis and other horrid diseases.

The Third method started in 1898 was Condemned in July, 1928, by the Rolleston Committee of vaccinating Doctors with Sir Humphry Rolleston, M.D., in the chair, appointed by

SCHICKITE INOCULATIONS

Diphtheria is a nasty disease, and during the three years, 1924, 1925, 1926, it killed on the average 2,756 persons a year in England and Wales.

But 453,000 people died from all causes in one year, so that only one in 176 deaths was due to diphtheria, and the deaths from this disease are rapidly growing fewer owing to the progress of sanitation.

Dr. Schick and his followers (Park, Zingher, and others) say that they have a test which tells if any person is liable to diphtheria, and that there is also an immunising process.

The Schickite processes are as follows :—

A solution of living diphtheria toxin (poison) is to be injected into the skin of all the children in the kingdom and of as many adults as will take it.

First they would test everyone as follows :—

Inject living toxin into the skin of the left forearm, then inject deadened toxin into the right forearm. They say if the left arm is inflamed you can take diphtheria, otherwise you cannot take it.

Immunisation

Then those who are liable must have a serum mixture injected into their skins three times at intervals of a week, after that they say you cannot take diphtheria.

They say that these injections will not do any harm.

The serum is made as follows : A broth of diphtheria poison is injected into the blood of a horse twice a week for about six months. Afterwards blood is drawn from the horse as wanted. From this blood serum is taken. This is mixed with diphtheria toxin (poison) and called "toxin-antitoxin." The mixture may be very deadly or less harmful according to the proportions mixed.

Animals also to Suffer

The misery of the horses is great, sometimes intense.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

TO THE PEOPLE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE:

THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES declared (vaccination case) Jacobson vs. Commonwealth, 1904, that:

"THERE IS OF COURSE, A SPHERE WITHIN WHICH THE INDIVIDUAL MAY ASSERT THE SUPREMACY OF HIS OWN WILL AND RIGHTFULLY DISPUTE THE AUTHORITY OF ANY HUMAN GOVERNMENT, ESPECIALLY OF ANY FREE GOVERNMENT EXISTING UNDER A WRITTEN CONSTITUTION TO INTERFERE WITH THE EXERCISE OF THAT WILL."

The highest Court in the land tells us our Constitutional rights; it tells us that "the individual may assert the supremacy of his own will (in the matter of vaccination) and rightfully dispute the authority of any human government . . . to interfere with the exercise of that will."

Only through the exercise of "Police Power" can a COMPULSORY Vaccination law be enforced.

While there are many definitions of Police Power and its functions, we have found none that include the COMPULSION of parents to submit their child's healthy body to the inoculation of disease.

New Hampshire is one of the few States that retains and enforces, a drastic COMPULSORY Vaccination Law, entirely out of harmony with the above Supreme Court decision. The right of any State of the Union to retain such a law may be challenged.

We must bear in mind that the Legislature or "General Court" as it is called, is the people's Court; we elect those who make or change or take away our laws; we should also bear in mind that before we elect these legislators, it is not only our right but our duty to question them as to their attitude towards this important subject,— COMPULSORY Vaccination, — which vitally affects every parent and every child in New Hampshire.

In order to safeguard our rights we must take away the compulsory vaccination law.

PLEASE READ THE FOLLOWING CAREFULLY, and see if you do not want to help!

WHO WILL BE NEXT?

Dolores, 8-year-old twin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Crane, 421 Columbia Place, East St. Louis, Illinois, died Feb. 18th, 1925, of tetanus, three weeks after being vaccinated for smallpox.

Czelaw, 6-year-old daughter of Anthony Siekerski, 545 N. Sixth Street, East St. Louis, Illinois, died Feb. 21st, 1925, of tetanus which followed three weeks after her vaccination.

Both these deaths followed compliance with a general order for the vaccination of children in East St. Louis schools, and physicians in attendance have declared that the tetanus probably had its origin in the vaccination wound in each case, as no other skin abrasions could be found.

Violet, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Guiney, of 1530a Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo., was vaccinated at school Jan. 13th, 1925. She died Jan. 25th, after suffering severely with pain first in legs, then stomach, then in heart.

Russell, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Skyles, 1705a N. Thirteenth Street, St. Louis, Mo., died Nov. 8, 1926, of tetanus, three weeks after being vaccinated at school.

Constance, 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Koetting, 5119 Wabada Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., was vaccinated at school late in October, 1926. Tetanus soon followed, also bone infection, causing her death on January 4, 1927.

All five children were more than ordinarily robust and healthy until vaccinated, their parents testify. Just victims of preventive medicine!

Some of us have reason to remember that at least thirteen children died and many were injured in St. Louis in November, 1901, from Antitoxin made by the city chemist from a horse suffering with tetanus.

In the fall of 1919, at least ten children died and many were crippled in Dallas, Texas, from the use of Toxin-Antitoxin as a preventive of Diphtheria. Seventy-six damage suits were filed against Mulford & Co., and in sixty-nine cases judgment was rendered. The other seven cases were settled out of court.

Smallpox seldom kills or cripples, and we are told that Diphtheria is no longer to be dreaded, since doctors can so readily cure it. Then why in the name of Reason compel a healthy child to be poisoned and diseased in order to obtain an education in our schools? It is contrary to Nature, to our Constitution, and to every decent instinct of a normal human mind. Why submit?

Slaughter of the Innocents

Violet, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Guiney, of 1530A Olive Street, St. Louis, Missouri, will never have smallpox. She was vaccinated at school, January 13th, 1925. Saturday, the 24th, a doctor was called, as her arm had been bothering her since the 20th. Dr. P. examined her thoroughly, stating her throat, lungs, kidneys, stomach, etc., were in good condition, and not to worry about her swollen arm with the red blotches, as that was a natural result of her vaccination! Diagnosed case as "Varioloid Smallpox from Vaccination."

As Violet grew worse, complaining of her stomach, Dr. P. was 'phoned again, but refused to return, saying he was wanted elsewhere.

The child's thighs were affected soon, becoming so sore she could not stand them touched. Another doctor was called. This Dr. Z. arrived about 2 P. M. Sunday, the 25th, and said "Tonsillitis."

Sometimes pain would suddenly cease and she would start playing, only to have severe pain appear in another location.

The little girl grew worse rapidly and the desperate mother 'phoned again and again,—always to be told Dr. Z. was wanted on another case.

Mrs. Guiney's landlady then 'phoned Dr. Z. to come or send another doctor at once, as the child was screaming with pain in the stomach. He finally sent Dr. D., who arrived just after the child had ceased breathing, the pain having changed to region of heart and being very severe toward the last. Dr. D. pronounced her "dead" about 12:30 Sunday night, January 25th. He said she died of "fright" and must have had a shock, but wrote "Bronchial Pneumonia" in the death certificate.

At the father's urgent request, an autopsy was held, and coroner's verdict said "Lobar Pneumonia," and that her throat, lungs, kidneys and heart were affected.

She was buried Tuesday, January 29th, the victim of "preventive medicine."

SWORN STATEMENT

Citizens, how much longer shall we allow medical politicians to control our schools? They are demanding more and more each year.

VIVISECTION includes the inoculation of animals with various diseases, which often causes extreme and lingering suffering. The product of these torturing experiments (serum), when applied to human beings, is frequently the cause of painful diseases and even death.

Vaccination Caused His Death

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of Nov. 23, 1926:—"Yes, Russell, our eldest son, is dead and buried. I haven't even a picture of him, because of our house having burned down a few months ago. He was never sick until one morning about two weeks after he was vaccinated at school (Friday, Oct. 15). Then, Friday, Oct. 29th, he laid in bed saying he didn't want to go to school, as his arm ached, and so did his head and stomach. The second morning lockjaw set in, and he never spoke or ate again, but died at the hospital, Nov. 8th, 1926."—Mrs. A. Skyles.

Following, we give what the "medical minds" had to say:—A chiropractor was first visited with Russell. He said the boy's whole system was poisoned from the vaccination, and he would not take the case, but advised the parents to see an M. D. The boy was taken to Dr. Peden, who thought the trouble was vaccination, gave him medicine, and advised sweating him. When the spasms began, Dr. Knight was called in. The boy's jaws were now locked, and Dr. Knight diagnosed the case as tetanus. Finding no skin abrasion other than the vaccination wound, he concluded that was the origin of the disease. He found it necessary to use very strong treatment, including 6000 units of tetanus antitoxin. This caused symptoms of pneumonia. Then came the doctors from our Health Department. Dr. Smith guessed sleeping sickness as the cause of the child's death. Dr. Farrow testified it was pneumonia in one lung. Dr. Byrns a day later said double pneumonia, and Dr. McFadden called it inflammation of the brain. Dr. Knight signed the death certificate for Undertaker Bopp, giving tetanus as the cause of death, but the latter was refused a burial permit and the certificate was not accepted. A post mortem was ordered. The decision was left to Dr. Gradwohl, bacteriologist, who experimented with a guinea pig and announced Russell had died of pneumonia.

Dr. Starkloff, Director of Public Health, in a signed article appearing in the St. Louis Star of Nov. 19th, said, "Russell Skyles did not and never had tetanus, or anything that simulated tetanus, and to say so was a display of stupendous ignorance or prejudice."

From the St. Louis Star of Nov. 26, 1926:—"Bereaved mother asks that school vaccination end!" Will the School Board ignore her plea? As there is no State law nor city ordinance requiring vaccination, nor anything in the city charter providing for it, the School Board must be held partly responsible for this death.

Mayor Miller, of St. Louis, writes: "Not being of a medical mind, I cannot comment on it. I am sorry this has occurred, but there is nothing I can do to remedy it."

The Mayor of Chicago, however, found a remedy. With the support of the City Council, a Board of Health was created composed entirely of laymen, and an ordinance passed providing that no person should be vaccinated or medicated without their consent or that of their parents or guardians.

Medical men claiming excessive authority are carrying on propaganda and oppressing citizens with the taxpayer's own funds.

HOW LONG SHALL WE STAND FOR IT?

VIVISECTION includes the inoculation of animals with various diseases, which often causes extreme and lingering suffering. The product of these torturing experiments (serum), when applied to human beings, is frequently the cause of painful diseases and even death.

The Lymph now used for Vaccination

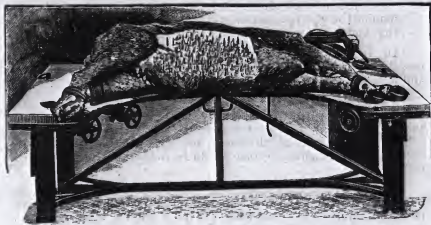

Official Description of the Dangerous Filth forced by Law into the Systems of Children, and description by Dr. Monckton Copeman of experiments to discover fresh sources for Lymph.

In the "Report to the Local Government Board, presented to Parliament by Royal Command, on the Preparation and Storage of Glycerinated Calf Vaccine Lymph," by Sir Richard Thorne and Dr. S. Monckton Copeman, these two gentlemen described what they saw at the Institut de Vaccine Animale in Paris. The calves cost about 147 francs each, and are sold at a loss of about 40 francs, in order, we suppose, to induce the butchers who buy them to palm off the diseased meat on their unsuspecting customers.

This report, published in 1897, describes the vaccination of the calf. The surface of the abdomen being shaved and washed, about one hundred incisions, "each about an inch long," are made. Over each incision a drop of glycerinated lymph is allowed to fall, and the drop is rubbed in. "The process is carried out by one of the laboratory servants, and is a somewhat lengthy one." What human beings suffer from two or three vaccine vesicles we know. What must the wretched calf suffer from a hundred or more?

The report thus describes the "Collection of Lymph" :—

How Calves are Placed When Operated Upon.

The vaccine material is always collected on the sixth day. The calf is once more placed on the table; or, if material is required for immediate use only, it is usually allowed to stand. The vaccinated area is washed with warm water, and dried with clean soft cloths. Each vesicle is now clamped separately, and the crust first removed with a lancet, which is then wiped on a cloth pinned to the front of the cotton blouse which the operator has previously donned.

NOTE.—From 1899 to 1920 (both years inclusive) the Registrar-General reported 343 deaths as due to "Corporax and other effects of Vaccination" in England and Wales, calf lymph being used officially during that period.

In 1892-1901, when the vaccinations had declined to an average of 67.9% of the births, the Smallpox deaths dropped to an average of 436 per annum. In 1902-1911, when the average number of vaccinations was 67.6% of the births, the Smallpox deaths averaged 395 per annum, but in 1912-1921, when the vaccinations had dropped to 43.4% of the births, there was an average of only 12 Smallpox deaths per annum. How can any person who claims to understand statistics and to have a logical brain declare that it is vaccination that has stamped out Smallpox, in face of the above official figures?

The Vaccination Question.

Has not Vaccination reduced the Smallpox Death-rate?

No, it could not have been vaccination, seeing that seventy years after the introduction of the operation into this country and eighteen years after it was made compulsory by Act of Parliament, the terrible smallpox epidemic of 1871-2 swept away nearly 44,000 people in England and Wales. It is sanitation that has reduced not only the smallpox death-rate, but also that for typhus fever, scarlet fever, and other zymotic diseases.

Do Vaccinated or Re-Vaccinated Persons Die of Smallpox?

Indeed they do. In London in the 1901-2 outbreak, 6,945 admittedly vaccinated persons took smallpox, and 706 OF THEM DIED. 276 admittedly re-vaccinated persons contracted the disease in the same outbreak, and 27 OF THEM DIED. Over 150 admittedly VACCINATED children UNDER FIVE YEARS OF AGE are recorded by the Registrar General as having DIED OF SMALLPOX in the last 30 years, and 105 of these were admittedly VACCINATED children UNDER TWO YEARS OF AGE. In the Sheffield epidemic of 1886-7, 10 admittedly vaccinated children under one year of age took smallpox.

Is there any Danger of Injury from Vaccination?

Yes, the risk is considerable. Over 6,000 cases of injury from Vaccination were reported to the Royal Commission on Vaccination. The operation also sometimes results in death, and even calf lymph does not prevent this. The Registrar General records 265 deaths from "cowpox and other effects of vaccination" during the years 1899 to 1911, glycerinated calf lymph having become the official vaccine in 1899. These figures do not indicate in the least degree the real amount of suffering caused by the operation.

Are there any Doctors or Eminent Men in other Professions opposed to Vaccination?

Among the few Doctors who have really investigated the vaccination question, there are several who have come to the conclusion that the operation is unscientific and ought not to be practised. Dr. Chas. Creighton, the author of "A History of Epidemics in Great Britain," calls vaccination "a grotesque superstition," and Professor Crookshank, whose work entitled "The History and Pathology of Vaccination," is the most complete text book on vaccination ever published, declared that in his opinion there was no scientific support for the practice, and it was bound to fall into desuetude. Sir William Collins, whose Minority Report of the Royal Commission on Vaccination is, practically speaking, an anti-vaccination text-book, is a very well-known surgeon. Herbert Spencer and Alfred Russel Wallace were very much opposed to vaccination. These are only a few of the men who could be cited as opponents of vaccination amongst those whose opinions are entitled to respect.

The National Anti-Vaccination League is a non-political body, and is entirely supported by voluntary contributions.

Your generous donations for the work of this Society are earnestly requested.

The Vaccination Controversy

reviewed on

Partly Novel Lines

by

H. DENNIS TAYLOR,

Author of "A system of applied Optics."

This booklet of 144 pages should be read by all students of the vaccination question.

The statistics of the Registrar-General, accepted by all, and the sorted statistics of vaccination advocates, are dealt with by a master-hand. Cold, clear statements showing the exact significance of the figures.

It deals with a subject of tremendous importance to the human race.

Two of the most celebrated writers of the 19th century, Herbert Spencer, the philosopher, and Alfred Russel Wallace, F.R.S., the biologist, said that vaccination was the most important political question of the present time.

Besides statistics, the book contains other valuable information. Mr. Taylor agrees with Professor Vogt that the statistics prove that one attack of smallpox does not protect against second and repeated attacks, but on the contrary increases the liability to attack.

The Gloucester Municipal Elections following the Smallpox Scare.

During June and July, 1923, the Mayor and the Chairman of the Gloucester Health Committee played into the hands of the officials of the Ministry of Health and allowed their own Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Bibby, who denied that there was smallpox in the City, to be superseded by a young doctor from Birmingham, who had had very little experience of smallpox.

It was proclaimed in the Press all over the country that a terrible smallpox epidemic was raging at Gloucester. This was absolutely false. Whatever the disease, it was so mild that it killed only one person out of 3,000 attacked. Very few of those attacked went to bed at all.

When the elections for the Gloucester Council took place on November 1st, 1923, the Mayor, the Chairman of the Health Committee, and others of the old members responsible for the wild and foolish smallpox panic were defeated, and Dr. Bibby was returned unopposed. The people rose in their wrath and turned out the men who had done such harm to their City.

Electors! Go and do likewise! Turn out those who misrepresent your views on vaccination! Get rid of the men and women who are ready to give medical officials a free hand in these matters! "He who would be free himself must strike the blow!"

TO ALL OBJECTORS TO VACCINATION!

One way of defeating tyrannical employers who, in defiance of the right of a human being to own his own body, insist on vaccination and dismiss those who refuse to undergo the blood-polluting operation, is to refuse to purchase any of the goods made by the firms who act in this manner. The names of several such firms are being supplied to the National Anti-Vaccination League, and will be published in due course.

Never eat food prepared by recently vaccinated persons. Inquire if manufacturers of foodstuffs have ordered the vaccination of their employees before you buy food of any kind.

If the millions of anti-vaccinists in this country would unite in this form of protest, they would defeat the greedy medical men, who reap such a harvest of fees from this torture, of helpless workers.

No. 9.

The Argument from Germany.

IT is commonly urged in favour of vaccination that Germany, by a compulsory Vaccination Law, first passed in 1874, has practically exterminated smallpox.

As to the date at which Vaccination first became compulsory in Prussia [for "Germany" cannot be spoken of as a whole before the union which succeeded the Franco-German War] much controversy has arisen. A Law passed in 1835 is disputed by vaccinists on the alleged ground that its terms do not exactly enforce Vaccination, but only apply in its favour an indirect pressure. The objection, however, omits all reference to the Royal Proclamation at the head of this Law, enjoining obedience on pain of fine and imprisonment "by everyone within the whole extent of my monarchy." But as it is only wished here to deal with facts beyond dispute and admitted by both sides, the Law of 1835 need not be further discussed at present.

But no one disputes that in 1834 a most severe Law was passed for the Prussian army, enforcing a vaccination or re-vaccination on every recruit with 10 insertions in each arm, and no objections being listened to. Combined with the conscription, which makes every healthy adult male serve his time with the colours, this Law secured the re-vaccination of every such male in Prussia. Yet when in 1871-2 the great pandemic struck Prussia, and she lost 124,948 of her citizens by smallpox, there is not the smallest evidence to show that the adults in this terrible mortality were prevaillingly female; in fact, what evidence there is points rather the other way.

Again, it is claimed that the great diminution in smallpox that has occurred in recent years in Germany is due to the enforcement of Vaccination under the Law of 1874.

But that Law was passed on April 8th, 1874, and only came into force on April 1st, 1875, and then allowed of twelve months from birth before vaccination became compulsory. Now the smallpox deaths per million living in Prussia for the five years before the new Law could have had any real effect on the vaccination of the population, stand thus—1871—2,432. 1872—2,623. 1873—356. 1874—95. 1875—36.

So that the improvement had been made before the Law came into force, and as not even medical effects can precede their causes, it becomes clear that whatever it was which caused the decline of smallpox in Prussia, it was not the Law of 1874.

Nor is direct official evidence of the failure of vaccination in Germany wanting; the difficulty is rather to select from its abundance. Berlin, in the great epidemic above alluded to, had 17,038 cases of

AUSTRIA FORBIDS USE OF SERUM

Decree Issued in Vienna Against Use of Toxin-Antitoxin as Inoculation

By Cable from Monitor Bureau
VIENNA, June 20 (By Mail to London)—The Minister of Social Welfare has issued a decree here forbidding for the time being the use of toxin-antitoxin mixture as an inoculation against diphtheria.

The decree was an inner department order given to The Serotherapeutic Institute of Vienna, which is the sole manufacturer of such serum for Austria, and which is controlled by the State. Application at the Ministry of Social Welfare by The Christian Science Monitor representative for a copy of the decree was met with the courteous reply that since the decree was an inner departmental one, it was against the rules that it be published.

It was possible, however, to obtain from an official the following statement: "Last February, the Ministry of Social Welfare, Dr. Joseph Resch, was induced by the experts' report made by the Supreme Board of Health to prohibit the application of inoculation matter prepared of toxin to actively immunize against diphtheria. This means a general prohibition of inoculating matter made of toxin, the fact being decisive, as the experts' report implies that a considerable period of experimentation would elapse before one can speak of this type of inoculating matter being entirely non-dangerous. In the meanwhile we have not this conviction."

So far as has been observed, the first public intimation of the decree appeared in the Arbeiter Zeitung of June 7. The notice says in part: "The Supreme Health Board has given its opinion based on the report of Professor Birquet, to the effect that vaccine matter, if prepared with toxin should not be applied against diphtheria. The Ministry of Social Welfare has accordingly issued a decree to the Serotherapeutic Institute forbidding the use of such material."

Foot-and-Mouth Disease.

Foot-and-Mouth Disease has been spread in America by vaccine farms. The outbreaks in 1902 and 1908 were officially admitted to have been started by contaminated vaccine on a vaccine farm. (See Report of the Bureau of Animal Industry, U.S.A., for 1908).

Smallpox scares in England and Wales have led to increased demands for vaccine lymph. Is it certain that there is no connection between these demands and the recent Foot-and-Mouth Disease outbreak? Have any recently vaccinated persons tended the animals which first sickened with this Disease?

Foot-and-Mouth Disease was conveyed to human beings in the American outbreaks. Is there not some possibility of the same thing happening in England with the use of calf lymph? It must be remembered that there are nine or ten firms which supply calf lymph to private practitioners, and no one knows the origin of the vaccine they supply, nor how it is propagated.

For years the Board of Agriculture has tried to find a serum to immunise animals against Foot-and-Mouth Disease, but every attempt has failed. Faith in Jenner and Pasteur leads only to failure.

An Earnest Word to Women Voters.

The National Anti-Vaccination League desire to bring under the consideration of women voters the following points:—

(1) Married women over thirty years of age whose husbands have votes and all women over thirty who occupy premises in their own name, have now a right to vote in Parliamentary elections provided their names are on the register.

(2) Many important questions will come before the nation at the next election.

(3) It may be difficult for voters to decide which candidate to support.

(4) To enable you to do this satisfactorily you must decide which is the most important question involving the welfare of the race.

(5) No question can be of greater importance than that of your own and your children's health and liberty. Perhaps the gravest interference with parental rights and personal liberty now outstanding is the State imposition of vaccination. Without a healthy body, other advantages are of little value.

(6) The call for a general revolt against medical tyranny is urgent. Doctors have been adding to the powers and privileges of their profession in nearly all countries during the last half century. They work to crush all rival methods of healing and to destroy all those who have not gone through the orthodox schools of medicine. At the present time the main feature of the faith of the doctors is a belief in injections of all kinds. Although as regards vaccination their powers of compulsion have been greatly reduced, they are constantly regretting the neglect of the people to have their children vaccinated, and they seize every opportunity that presents itself for imposing the operation on the ignorant and defenceless. MOST OF THEM WOULD GLADLY BRING BACK COMPULSION. Unless we have strong men and earnest women in Parliament whom we can trust to watch over our liberties, we shall never be safe from medical tyranny.

(7) Vaccination involves the mixture of filthy animal diseased matter with human blood, and is perhaps the most loathsome and dangerous practice ever imposed on the public by the medical profession. Many eminent medical men who have studied the subject for themselves have incurred the anger and revenge of their profession by warning the public against this superstition. These brave doctors have helped thousands of parents to save their children from vaccination; those parents should now show their gratitude by voting for the anti-vaccinist candidate, if there is one in the constituency.

Anti-vaccinist voters should bear in mind that local Councils have considerable powers. The local Council is frequently the Sanitary Authority charged with the duty of dealing with local smallpox cases. Through its "Health" officials it can create a smallpox "scare" and secure the vaccination of large numbers of the frightened public. It can suspend those of its officials or workpeople who refuse to be vaccinated on the occurrence of a few cases of smallpox. The Bentley Council suspended some of its scavengers recently for refusing vaccination. It may require smallpox contacts to be isolated either at their own homes or at a special place. It can bring pressure to bear on employers to forbid those contacts who refuse vaccination to work whilst allowing those who accept the operation to follow their ordinary pursuits. It can show unfair discrimination in other ways between those who accept and those who refuse vaccination. Medical Officers of Health have now the power to vaccinate contacts themselves and charge the cost to the rates. When schemes are discussed regarding the future of the work of Boards of Guardians, it is always suggested that their powers under the Vaccination Acts shall be transferred to the local Councils.

Local Councils are closely connected with the local Education Authority. The importance of this fact is evident when smallpox is discovered in a school. The Council doctor may also be, and frequently is, the school doctor, and if he believes in vaccination and has the support of his Council, he naturally pushes vaccination amongst the school children.

The Leicester Council has shown its Medical Officers the right way to deal with smallpox. If anti-vaccinists saw to it that all other Councils were similarly enlightened regarding vaccination and smallpox, Medical Officers would find themselves obliged to face the facts and would discover that vaccination could be entirely discarded.

SUGGESTED QUESTIONS TO CANDIDATES:-

- (1) Are you opposed to compulsory vaccination?
- (2) Will you undertake, if elected, to use your influence to secure the fair treatment of anti-vaccinists among the public and in the council's employ, should smallpox occur in the district?
- (3) Will you undertake to assist in getting the council to pay compensation to persons vaccinated at its request who suffer through the operation?

Vaccination : Warning to Mothers.

WHAT DO MEDICAL MEN SAY 'VACCINATION IS?

Dr. John Stewart (Perth): "I consider vaccination to be one of the greatest humbugs ever foisted on human beings."

Dr. Chas. Creighton, M.D., Aberdeen: "A grotesque superstition."

Dr. E. M. Crookshank: "A dangerous practice."

Dr. E. Haughton: "Quackery by Act of Parliament."

Dr. C. E. Page: "The supreme folly of the Medical Profession."

Dr. A. M. Ross: "An infamous crime and a beastly outrage."

Dr. C. M. Nicholas: "A blunder in poisons."

Dr. Allison: "A ghastly risk."

Dr. J. W. Hodge: "A gigantic delusion . . . never saved a single life."

Dr. Hadwen: "The most gigantic piece of quackery ever exploited among a civilised people."

Dr. J. Mackenzie, M.D., P.R.C.P., Edin.: "All with eyes or ears must know that crowds of the vaccinated are attacked by and die of smallpox."

Dr. Smith, of Dunse: "I have seen a multitude of cases in which smallpox has in every possible shape taken place after vaccination."

Dr. Hitchman: "I have seen hundreds of children killed by vaccination."

Dr. Turnbull: "I have seen healthy children die rotten from the effects of vaccination."

Dr. Collins: "If I had the desire to describe one-third of the victims ruined by vaccination the blood would stand still in your veins."

Dr. Keller, Head Physician, Imperial State Railways, Austria: "Vaccination is utterly worthless."

Dr. A. Vogt, Berne University: "After collecting the particulars of 400,000 cases of smallpox, I am compelled to admit that my belief in vaccination is absolutely destroyed."

Professor A. R. Wallace: "Vaccination is utterly opposed to the whole teaching of Sanitary Science, and is one of the most terrible blunders."

No. 60.

ANTI-TYPHOID INOCULATION IS NOT COMPULSORY. VACCINATION IS NOT COMPULSORY.

1. Anti-typhoid inoculation is not Compulsory.

Lord Kitchener (through his private secretary) informed Mr. J. Dobson, of Oakleigh Park, London, on September 14th, 1914, that "anti-enteric inoculation is not compulsory."

Lord Kitchener on 2nd June, 1916, wrote to Mr. H. G. Chancellor, M.P.: "... If a man has conscientious objections" (to vaccination and inoculation) "no pressure is to be brought to bear on him. ..."

Lord Haldane informed Lord Tenterden, in the House of Lords, on January 7th, 1915 (see "The Times," January 8th), that inoculation was not compulsory for any soldier.

Mr. Cubitt, of the War Office, wrote to the Secretary of the National Anti-Vaccination League under date October 4th, 1914, "I am further to state that inoculation against enteric fever is not compulsory on any one."

Mr. Arthur Henderson, Labour Representative on the Parliamentary Recruiting Committee, writing to Mr. W. Grove Parriss, of Trowbridge, Wilts, on March 24th, 1915, said:—"We have also had an intimation from the War Office that inoculation is not in any way compulsory."

On June 13th, 1916, Mr. Cubitt wrote to Mr. Chancellor, M.P.: "I am to add that inoculation against enteric fever is a voluntary operation."

Statements of men in such high positions are binding; they amount to pledges. The indirect pressure which has been exercised by Army Officers, without interference by the War Office, is dishonourable.

2. Inoculated men have contracted Typhoid and died of it.

In India from 1908 to 1912 (both years inclusive) 872 inoculated men contracted either typhoid or paratyphoid fever, and 88 of them died of one or other of those diseases. That gives a fatality rate of over 10 per cent. In the Boer war the system was such a ghastly failure that the Army authorities gave it up for over 18 months after the war.

3. Anti-typhoid inoculation is Dangerous.

On November 6th, 1914, a Territorial named Nichols died, and the doctor who attended him gave a certificate attributing death in the first place to anti-typhoid vaccination. In the "British Medical Journal" for November 28th, 1914, there are particulars of many cases of injury collected by Sir William Osler, in response to his request for particulars of cases where anti-typhoid inoculation had done harm. Professor Sims Woodhead in his address at the Royal Sanitary Institute, on December 8th, 1914, admitted that there had been a large number of cases in which the reaction from the inoculation had been very severe, and he asked for suggestions for rendering the effects less trying. Dr. Goddard, inoculating Territorials in France, found the reaction so serious that he decided that it was inadvisable to inoculate any more men over the age of 35 years.

4. Sanitary Improvements Banish Typhoid.

In England and Wales, without inoculation against typhoid, the death rate from this disease has steadily declined, as the following figures show:—

Five-year Period.	Annual Death Rate to a Million Persons Living.	Five-year Period.	Annual Death Rate to a Million Persons Living.
1871-75	878.8	1896-1900	174.8
1876-80	277.2	1901-05	112.6
1881-85	316.0	1906 (one year)	60
1886-90	179.2	1913 (do. do.)	40
1891-95	172.6

In the year 1869 the rate was 390, in 1875 (the year of the great Public Health Act) 371. In 1913 it had dropped to 40. The Japanese Army (without inoculation) had about one-sixth the amount of typhoid in the British Army in South Africa (with inoculation). Why? Because the Japanese Army doctors paid scrupulous attention to the drinking arrangements and general sanitary conditions of the men. When these sanitary preventatives are adopted inoculation is needless. When they are not adopted inoculation is futile. Nay, it is worse than futile, because it tends to make its recipients careless in the observance of rational preventives.

Excerpt from President's Address

Before the Ohio State Medical Association, June, 1905

By J. F. BALDWIN, A.M., M.D., F.A.C.S.
Columbus, Ohio

Surgeon-in-chief to Grant Hospital, Consulting Surgeon Children's Hospital, Fellow Association of Obstetricians, Gynecologists and Abdominal Surgeons, Etc.

At the present time the profession is being overwhelmed with traveling representatives of manufacturing drug houses, who, in addition to all sorts of drugs, are foisting upon us serums and vaccines and preparations of various organs, practically none of which have been demonstrated to have any value whatever, and most of which are known by intelligent physicians to be worthless or worse. I had a little correspondence some time ago with one of these manufacturers, and though he admitted that the best men in the profession did not use such preparations, he seemed happy in telling me how many million doses he had sold to the other kind in the course of a year.

The treatment of diseases, or their prevention, by antitoxins, serums and vaccines is still very largely in the experimental stage, with grave doubts as to the value of the vast majority. Unfortunately much of our literature on these subjects, including statistics, is furnished by the manufacturers who are interested, above all things, in the financial aspects of their production. One of the most prominent general practitioners in Ohio called my attention some months ago to the fact that even diphtheria antitoxin acquired its reputation when the doses used were so small as would now be regarded as entirely inadequate, and those doses given at a stage of the disease in which their administration is now looked upon as practically useless.

A number of years ago there was a grave epidemic of diphtheria in Philadelphia. The epidemic was proving remarkably fatal when a firm of manufacturing pharmacists appeared and, with the claim that the antitoxin had not been properly administered, proposed to the officials that they would take charge of the situation, would furnish antitoxin free of expense, and would supervise its administration, provided merely that they should be permitted to use the statistics which they would thus obtain. Their proposition was promptly accepted; the antitoxin was used with a free hand, but the statistics were never published! I refer to this merely as an illustration of the purely commercial attitude of the manufacturing firms. Statistics can be of no possible value when the unfavorable ones are suppressed and only the favorable ones published. It is an old legal aphorism: "Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus"—"false in one thing, false in all," and that maxim should be rigidly applied to all such reports, statistical and otherwise."

When Regular Doctors Think Out Loud

I.

Dr. Mather Pfeiffenberger, President Illinois State Medical Society, addressed the Annual Conference of Illinois Health Officers, which was held at Springfield on December 3d and 4th, 1926. His speech was printed in the January 1927 issue of the Illinois Health News, official organ of Isaac D. Rawlings, M. D., State Director of Health. The following is an extract from that speech:

"Prevention practiced to its utmost will create more work for the physician and not diminish it, for the full time health officer will be educating his community constantly. There will be more vaccination, more immunizing, more consulting and use of the physician. His services would be increased many fold.

"I am informed that epidemic and endemic infections cause only 12 per cent of all deaths and that this percentage is declining very rapidly. Only 15 per cent of all children would ever get diphtheria, even under epidemic conditions, while 100 per cent are prospects for toxin-antitoxin. The percentage who would ever get smallpox, under present time conditions, is even less; but 100 per cent are prospects for vaccination. Scarlet fever will soon come in for its 100 per cent also, as it may for measles (sic), judging from the reports on that disease. Typhoid fever is disappearing, due to sanitation, but vaccination should be used when the individual travels into unknown territory and countries."

II.

How is this for a Chaser ?

"J. P. Leake, M. D., Surgeon, U. S. Public Health Service," was the signature under the following "Immunization Program," printed in the Journal of the American Medical Association of January 28, 1928:

TO THE EDITOR:—The problem offered by the query from Pennsylvania (THE JOURNAL, January 7, p. 51) relative to immunization of nurses is an interesting one in practical immunology, and in part, at least, is not infrequently presented to the physician. Carrying out the same general order as that given in THE JOURNAL, and with the same number of visits to the physician (seven-teen), the following scheme would serve to give the most favorable days for observation and for reading the various reactions:

Day zero: Schick test on the right upper arm and control on the left upper arm, using the flexor surface 2 inches above the fold of the elbow.

Day 2: (Two days later): Smallpox vaccination on the left upper arm over the insertion of the deltoid muscle (not on the leg).

SAYS JOHN W. DAVIS

A distinguished member of the bar, formerly Solicitor General of the United States, the Democratic Candidate for President, no less, is reported in the Chicago Tribune of September 14, 1924, as having declared himself in the strongest terms on the protection of our constitutional liberties. This was in a speech at Grand Island, Nebraska.

"And what are those liberties?" he said. "Freedom of speech; freedom of the press; freedom of assembly; trial by jury; the right of religious worship according to the dictates of our own conscience; freedom from search and seizure; freedom from conviction by bill of attainder at the hands of any Legislature; and all that long calendar of things that makes every man a freeborn and independent citizen.

"Shall we surrender them? Never! Shall we surrender them at the will of a majority of the people? Not so long as one individual remains to claim them! Shall we surrender them at the demand of any Legislature, or a majority of the Legislature? Never! Shall we surrender them at the demand of a majority of Congress? Never!

"And if we are disposed not to surrender them, what is our guaranty, and our protection for their preservation?

"It is that when any Congress, any Legislature, or any executive, passes a law or undertakes to enforce a law that would deprive us of them, we will ignore the law and declare that it has no value or substance.

"And then if we are arrested for its disobedience, what happens? We stand before the court and say, 'This law under which arrest has been made is no law at all, and we call upon you so to declare; to declare that our liberties have been invaded and release us from this unlawful custody.'

"That is the American theory, my friends. And so long as that power remains in an impartial court, so long our liberties are safe."

Vaccination and All Inoculations Violate God's Law

"When once you interfere with the order of Nature there is no knowing where the results will end."—Herbert Spencer, Chapter on Vaccination, in "Facts and Comments."

That Vaccination and all serum inoculations constitute interference with the order of nature is seen in the following from James John Garth Wilkinson, M. D., Physician and Author, London,

Follow Nature's processes in blood formation, and you will see how and why vaccination is unphysiological.

In nature, nothing enters the blood and becomes part of it until it is first selected by the sense of taste. It is then eaten, broken up and carried through long avenues of introduction; along these avenues stand many sentinels exercising their qualifying and mitigating and selecting functions; digestive juices and glandular and lung purifications act upon the blood pabulum before it becomes part of the stream of life.

This is physiology and divine and human decency, and like a man's life. But—

Vaccination traverses and tramples upon all these safeguards and wisdoms; it goes direct to the blood, or still worse, the lymph, and not with food; it puts POISON, introduced by PUNCTURE, and that has no test applicable to it, and can have no character given to it, but that it is five-fold animal and human poison, at a blow into the very center, thus otherwise guarded by nature in the providence of God. This is blood assassination.

X- RM 787 Health Destroyer Supreme

28 "More children of the ages 10 to 14 years die of heart disease in Chicago than of all other children's diseases put together."

That appalling statement was issued November, 1925, by the Chicago medical health department.

Alongside it set this:—

"I take the many deaths of prominent people from 'heart failure' in the prime of life—which the papers are always reporting—to be merely a sequence of inoculation in some form or other. Poor Lord Carnarvon, of course, died under the treatment."

—Herbert Snow, M. D., London, in "Abolitionist", Dec., 1925.

With the insistence of medical health officials, perfectly healthy children are being shot with antitoxins, serums, or vaccines, to "prevent" diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever, smallpox, typhoid fever and rabies. Hospitals help on the deadly work.

Disease, of course, can never be prevented by such gross tampering with blood and lymph. Nature can't be fooled. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

Adults have been getting theirs in a score of ways. "Gland therapy," "insulin," injections to lower blood pressure, inoculations to prevent and cure asthma and hay fever, injections to cure venereal diseases, rheumatism, etc., etc., besides all the preventive inoculations our soldiers got and went down under. Cemeteries and hospitals are filled with them.

The wonder is that so many people still call doctors. The political M. D. is destroying his profession.

And now it is the turn of the cow and the hen. Tuberculin tests are on the same order. Applied to the cow, they shorten her life even, though she does not react. The price of milk goes up accordingly. Besides, milk is poisonous just after the cow is tested.

Why not abolish the medical health officer? He is the Health Destroyer Supreme.

The medical trust is planning still more of the same kind for the cities, and now, through "health districting" and "public and control to the rural districts.

The whole system is not merely un-American, it is UNCON-

FAMOUS CHURCHMAN INDICTS VACCINATION

Mr. Alexander Marky, Chairman

Anti-Vaccination Compulsory Committee

I regret that pressing engagements of long standing have made it impossible for me to attend the hearing today. I am glad, however, of the opportunity to write you just a word of earnest commendation for the bill proposing to make vaccination voluntary instead of compulsory.

I would point out to you that there are many citizens today, both men and women, who believe in divine healing and therefore are conscientiously opposed to the use of drugs or man-made remedies in any form.

Under our established principle of religious freedom, such citizens ought to be left free to follow their own conscience in such vital matters as vaccination, etc.

There are many of us today—both laymen and physicians—who believe that the epidemics of smallpox that formerly scourged the race have been prevented by proper sanitation along the lines which God himself directed in the Bible. We believe that sanitation, and not vaccination, ought to receive the credit for preventing smallpox in epidemic form.

The scientific and medical men who are in opposition point out that vaccination is in itself a disease, and a strong argument can be made for the proposition that it is far more harmful to have ALL the children of today suffering from this vaccination disease than it would be to have A FEW of them suffer even from smallpox.

As is well known, vaccine is a poison pus taken from sores on the lower animals. Under the present law this poisonous lymph—this horrible excretion of disease—is inserted into the blood current of each child of the law abiding citizens and the little children, who

ATTENTION, CITIZENS!

Health is forbidden by medical boards. Healthy children cannot go to school until they have first been infected with a disease. Employees cannot work until they have had their blood tainted. All must first bear the scars testifying to the contamination.

It is time to call a halt to the enforcement of the heathen rite of "cowpoxing."

It is time to claim your right to health.

The first step is simple: Refuse and Resist all violations of your person—whether vaccination, or medical inspection, or any compulsory medical treatment. This is a duty as well as a right.

But it is not enough to resist, unless you want to spend all your life fighting. The next step is to abolish medical officials. Why spend your good money for medical propaganda which you believe to be mischievous to health and life? That is where it goes when you pay for medical health boards. Why keep men in your pay in order to give them a chance to plot against your liberty?

Join the movement to end these abuses. Give us your name to the propositions below:

- I am opposed to compulsory vaccination.
- I favor entire freedom of choice in the care of the health.
- I am for sanitary boards in place of medical health boards.

BABY SHOW AT CAPEL

49

The Dorking Advertiser for August 22nd reported that at the Capel Baby Show, Dr. H. C. Billings (Westcott) "mentioned that one otherwise fine baby he had had to disqualify because it was unvaccinated." He pointed out that vaccination was essential to the well-being of the baby, and hoped mothers would bear this in mind.

The Judges of Baby Shows do not appear to realise that vaccination is not essential to the well-being of the baby, if without that operation, it comes up to the standard of the prize baby.

A study of the statistics for England and Wales in respect of Infant Mortality shows that, after the introduction of compulsory vaccination, there was a terrible increase in deaths of infants from various inoculable diseases. It also shows that the infantile death rate did not decline to any marked extent until the year 1909, which was also the first year in which vaccination took a decided step downwards. As the vaccinations have declined, so has the Infant Mortality rate gone down, and when for the year 1924 the vaccination rate went up, the Infant Mortality rate went up, thus showing that the greater the number of vaccinations, the greater the number of deaths among children. These are facts which cannot be got over. It cannot be right to poison a baby's blood with the horrible mixture known as Pure Glycerinated Calf Lymph, and there is something very extraordinary about the idea of a perfectly healthy baby being passed over at a BABY SHOW and the prize given to one who has had its blood poisoned (even though the poisoning may be only temporary).

Mr. and Mrs. Worstfold's Disqualified baby, which received a special consolation prize of merit from the Dorking Anti-vaccination League.

The bigoted prejudice of some of the medical practitioners appears to be the only ground for such an absurd practice being adopted as that of disqualifying a healthy child because it had been kept in good health by its parents, who choose to use their own common sense and judgment in the bringing up of their children, and who are naturally influenced more by personal experience and observation than by the illogical statements of those interested in the maintenance of the practice of sowing the seeds of disease in the human body with the consequent harvest of suffering which cannot be tabulated.

WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE FOR THE ANTI-VACCINATOR

IF THERE IS ONE AMONG THE CANDIDATES.

If a majority of pro-vaccinist Candidates are returned, then—

(1) The permanent medical officials of the Ministry of Health will get them to repeal the exemption clause contained in the Vaccination Act of 1907. (Under this clause infant vaccination has been reduced from 75 per cent. to less than 40 per cent. of the births.)

The officials have already started in this direction by removing the vaccination declaration form from the paper given to persons registering births.

(2) The medical officials will be encouraged in their policy of creating smallpox scares which cause employers of labour to force vaccination on their workpeople and school authorities to use every effort to get school children vaccinated (sometimes with disastrous results).

(3) Vaccination will be maintained and encouraged and will continue to kill practically four times as many children as die from smallpox.

(4) You will not be able to get rid of the compulsory clauses of the Vaccination Acts which are still on the Statute Book and which can be used at any time against the thousands of defaulters in the country, i.e., against those who have failed to get exemption for their children within four months of their birth.

(5) You may have other vaccines and anti-toxins foisted on you.

Medical practice is continually changing, and it is absurd to continue compulsion for a discredited practice invented 120 years ago.

The method of inoculation practised from 1730 to 1840 is now a penal offence punishable with one month's imprisonment.

Jenner's horsegrease or cowpox arm-to-arm vaccination, practised for 100 years ending 1896, is now discredited and considered too dangerous to use.

The vaccine now used is prepared from matter the source of which is kept secret. Cowpox is not mentioned because it provokes symptoms analogous to those of syphilis. Smallpox is not mentioned because vaccine from that source would be illegal.

Vaccination is a disgusting fraud. It gives no protection against smallpox, and kills and injures large numbers of people.

1. Are you aware that the Anti-Vaccination movement is supported by a majority of the people in England, Wales and Scotland?

2. Do you know that a number of medical men are strongly opposed to vaccination?

3. Perhaps you will have to decide before long whether to submit to vaccination yourself or to consent to the vaccination of someone dear to you. Would it not be as well to study both sides before giving your practical support to the operation?

The whole case against vaccination is given in Mr. Milnes's extremely able pamphlet, "What About Vaccination?" just republished by the NATIONAL ANTI-VACCINATION LEAGUE, 25, Denison House, Vauxhall Bridge Road, London, S.W.1, out of a memorial fund subscribed by admirers of the author of the work (Alfred Milnes, M.A., D.Lit.). The Birth of the Vaccination Fraud

In his article "The Fraud of Vaccination," published last week in Truth, Dr. Hadwen made some remarks not altogether complimentary to the discoverer of the reputed prophylactic against smallpox. These remarks led one reader to denounce both Dr. Hadwen and myself—Dr. Hadwen for libelling one of the greatest benefactors of humanity, and myself for propagating the libel. Dr. Hadwen is well able to take care of himself. For my own part, not wishing to do any injustice to the name and fame of the late Dr. Jenner, I asked Dr. Hadwen what he had against him, and he replied by sending me a pamphlet he has written on the subject. This I have compared with the account of Jenner's life given in the "Dictionary or National Biography," and the result is so illuminating that I will now give the salient facts as briefly as possible.

To begin with, it is clear that Jenner never possessed anything that would be recognized to-day as a medical qualification. At the age of sixteen he was apprenticed to a country surgeon and apothecary, and at twenty-one he was sent for two years as a pupil to Dr. John Hunter, of London, who undoubtedly was the most eminent surgeon of his day, and, like Jenner himself, a keen naturalist. At twenty-three Jenner returned to his native village and started to practice as surgeon and apothecary. Here he remained for seventeen years, just a plain unqualified country surgeon and apothecary, unknown to the world at large, but keeping up a correspondence with Hunter on a variety of natural history subjects. At the end of this period he made his first bid for fame. In 1787 he sent a paper on "The Natural History of the Cuckoo" to the Royal Society, and, as a result, with Hunter's influence, he was elected F.R.S. The paper contained a number of commonplace facts and some others, which Jenner stated to be from his own observation. The latter turned out to be purely imaginary, Jenner having accepted the report of a youthful nephew on the incidents he described. The coveted fellowship, therefore, appears to have been obtained by something very nearly approaching fraud. Three years later he applied to St. Andrew's University for an M.D., and as St. Andrew's in those days was no more squeamish about granting degrees than some of the so-called American Universities are to-day, so long as the fees are forthcoming, Jenner became Dr. Jenner for the modest outlay of £15. Later on in life, after several applications, he was also granted an M.D. by the University of Oxford, though this was not until after his discovery had been generally adopted.

As for the discovery itself, it appears to have been founded upon what Dr. Hadwen calls a "superstition among the dairymaids of Gloucestershire that a person who had suffered from cow-pox would never have smallpox." I hardly think any one would to-day regard this as more than superstition.

Deaths Numerous
Smallpox Six Times As ~~Fatal~~ In The Vaccinated
As In The Unvaccinated. X- RM 787

Proved by Illinois Health Officials

.28 #118

The Illinois Health News, monthly bulletin of the State department of health, for April, 1928, has the following figures, which cover the entire State:

Chickenpox Deaths in 1927..... 18
Smallpox Deaths in 1927..... 3
Smallpox Cases in 1927..... 1,319

Chickenpox is well known as a trifling and (without complications, in which case it ceases to be mere Chickenpox) a never fatal ailment. What, then, is the Chickenpox that kills six times as many as are killed by Smallpox? The question is easily answered.

Health officials steadily refuse to record a case of smallpox in a "recently successfully" vaccinated person. Chickenpox has been used as the ~~alias~~ in Illinois and elsewhere for several years. The Chicago health commissioner, two or three years ago, publicly stated (interview, front page of Tribune) that the way to differentiate between Smallpox and Chickenpox is to see if the case is vaccinated. If vaccinated, then the disease is Chickenpox; if unvaccinated, it is Smallpox. Close observers have known this has been the health office standard for years past.

Therefore the reader will understand that ALL CHICKENPOX DEATHS are cases of Smallpox in Vaccinated persons that terminated fatally. But all unvaccinated Smallpox does not terminate fatally. Only 1 death in 439 2/3 cases in Illinois in 1927.

Being as charitable toward vaccination as we can, let us assume that vaccinated Smallpox in 1927 was no more fatal than the unvaccinated, and see how many cases of vaccinated Smallpox in Illinois that will give us. It took 439 2/3 cases of the unvaccinated to produce one death. There were 18 vaccinated Smallpox deaths. Multiply 18 by 439 2/3 and you have 7,914 as the number of CASES OF SMALLPOX IN ACCEPTABLY VACCINATED PERSONS in Illinois in 1927.

What is done in Illinois is done all over the U. S. Medical health officials are one in thought and practice. THEY ARE THE WILLING (and maybe well paid) AGENTS OF THOSE DISEASE FACTORIES, THE "BIOLOGICAL LABORATORIES." Their practice (inoculation) diseases and kills. Why tolerate them? We propose their abolition and the substitution of Departments of Sanitation Controlled by Sanitary Engineers. We steadily move toward that end. Join us and hasten the day when Disease Propagation ceases as a government function. 2 Bernard Shaw on Vaccination

X-Ann 787.28 # 119

British celebrations of the centenary of Edward Jenner, who conceived the delusion of vaccination and forced it on a world which is growing daily more skeptical of the worth of his discovery, has given Bernard Shaw an opportunity to break a lance with the defenders of this superstition. He does not call it superstition. He refers to it as "the most amazing empirical stunt in medical history," and goes on to thank Americans for having invented the word "stunt," prior to which there was no way of describing this "vaccination craze."

Mr. Shaw is by no means a clear thinker on the subject of health and disease. His own mind, in many respects, is somewhat medicated. Nevertheless, his common sense has shown him the futility of a system of hygiene which he sums up by saying: "You deliberately contracted the disease to protect yourself from it." And his trenchant wit enables him to emphasize the absurdities of this vanishing medical illusion in a way that enforces his conclusions upon the reader. He sums up all that there is of intelligent defense for the vaccination theory thus:

People believed that they could not have the same sort of fever twice. They also saw that a fever caught spontaneously was usually much worse than a fever artificially forced on a healthy person.

Of these two articles of faith the first must always prevail among primitive rough-and-ready thinkers. They discover by simple experience that a man is unlikely to have any one disease twice. They overlook the fact that he is unlikely to have it once, and therefore, a fortiori very unlikely to have it twice. . . .

He goes on to question the worth of purely medical testimony as to the merits of this system of protection against fancied evil in this fashion:

Prophylactic medicine, . . . is a godsend to the British doctor, for it enables him to get fees from healthy patients. The strenuous and practically unanimous testimony of the medical profession that prophylactic inoculations, including vaccination and revaccination, are priceless boons to the human race, is worth as much as the equally emphatic testimony of the butcher and the meat trade generally against vegetarianism. . . . As there is no trade more lucrative than the trade in well-advertised cures, capital soon woke up to the advertising value of statistics. The manufacture of vaccines, anti-toxins, and antiseptics became a flourishing industry, always sure of a good word in the newspapers. The second half of the nineteenth century was drenched, poisoned, neustered by carbolic acid until the trade in it must have been almost as profitable as the liquor trade.

Mr. Shaw is waging a winning fight in a community which is rapidly coming to accept his conclusions. For in England the vaccinationists are fighting a losing battle. British law already has revolted against the effort of physicians to enforce upon unwilling persons inoculation with virulent diseases. What is being attempted in all parts of the United States, and what is unhappily the law in many sections, has been repudiated in portions of England, and is rapidly coming to be abandoned in all parts of that country. Compulsory vaccination is being abolished, bit by bit. So much so, indeed, that its English advocates are now complaining that the Nation as a whole is unvaccinated, and Mr. Shaw suggests "openly long for a terrible epidemic to punish us for our apostasy." In his articles in The Nation and the Athenaeum he sums up, even too briefly, the prolonged fight in British politics and in the British courts against this imposition upon a people, which still holds its sway in the United States; and he says of the present situation: "The bubble is burst. The stunt is played out. Only in the homes of lost causes which have supplanted Oxford: the medical profession, the magistracy, and the press, is vaccination now believed in as Jenner believed in it."

WARNING

Toxin-Antitoxin (like all serums and vaccines) is DANGEROUS. It is of no value—except to those who make it, sell it, and shoot it into the children.

Pushing it through the schools and elsewhere by "health" officials is a piece of lawless impudence that ought to be stopped, and that will be frowned upon and discouraged by intelligent citizens.

The informed know that what medical health officials do in the schools and elsewhere today "by permission," will be done under compulsion as soon as the "voluntaries" are numerous enough.

Therefore YOUR SAFETY and that of those dear to you is imperiled by this serum-selling campaign, and it is as much YOUR BUSINESS to warn others as to refuse the operation for your own family. Besides it is a matter of good citizenship to check misuse of office and power.

Do your part, act promptly, and aid us to distribute this circular.

Those who care to "read up" on the subject, send 10 cents for other literature.

NATIONAL OBSERVER

CHICAGO LEADS WORLD: HAS REAL HEALTH BOARD

Chicago, one of the largest cities in the world, has lead the world by passing an ordinance which has created a real health board, and which at the same time protects the citizens of the city against any kind of compulsory medication.

The new health board consists of five laymen, the Commissioner of Public Works, the Corporation Counsel, the Commissioner of Buildings, the Chief of Police and the Fire Commissioner. The protective clause of the ordinance reads as follows:

"The Board of Health shall pass no rule or regulation which shall compel any person to submit to vaccination, or injection of any virus, or medication, against his will or without his consent, or, in the case of a minor or other person under disability, the consent of his or her parent, guardian, or conservator, and nothing in this ordinance contained, or in any other ordinance heretofore passed and in force in this city, shall be construed to authorize or empower any person or officer to so vaccinate, inject, or medicate, without such consent, or to authorize or empower the said board of health to adopt any rule or regulation requiring or authorizing any such vaccination, injection or medication."

All other cities which hope to be considered really modern and up-to-date, every county, every state, and the United States as a nation, will be eventually forced to take the same advanced step that Chicago has taken.

Resentment has been growing for years against the cold-blooded, outrageous tyranny of the medical politicians who have gradually succeeded in entrenching themselves in health departments everywhere. This resentment has grown even among those who honor and respect honest medical doctors and use them regularly, as well as among those who believe in and use drugless methods of healing, and the best type of medical men themselves frankly state that they have no time for autocratic medical police in health departments.

News of the progressive step taken by Chicago should encourage immediate action all over the land to have similar ordinances or statutes passed everywhere.

Are you satisfied with the existing "Public Health" rule?

—With the manufacture of DISEASE with Chlorine, Calf-Pus, Horse-Serum, Tuberculin? 28 #122

(Chlorine in Water, Calf-Pus in your Blood, Horse-Serum and Calf-Pus in your Children's, Tuberculin in Milk and Meat.) All are Poisons.

All are forced upon citizens—some upon nearly every citizen.

The "degenerative diseases," heart disease and cancer, steadily grow. Men are dropping in the street, dropping at the steering wheel, dropping in the engine cab—losing life and endangering many lives. More children are dying of heart disease between certain years than of all children's diseases put together. (Chicago health office bulletin.)

Time was, within the memory of all who have reached middle life, when "falling dead" in one's prime was a rare thing; while heart disease in children was almost entirely confined to those born defective.

And now, in the pretended interest of the "public health," the public is diseased by wholesale, by wholesale is brought down in premature death.

Why? Solely because citizens PERMIT the kind of public health rule that causes this slaughter. Citizens can end it.

The American Medical Liberty League exists to end it. It needs your help to end it. For the way to do it, see OVER.

Philippines Pus Punching

"Catch 'em young, treat 'em rough, tell 'em nothing" has been pus punchery's slogan in the Philippine Islands. 'Twas a virgin field for vaccination witchcraft and it wasn't going to be pitied—nor pitted—for its smallpox epidemics. No, sir! The Philippine Health Service was going to smite the monster of smallpox ere ever it raised its putrid head in that Pus Puncher's Paradise! Our "island wards" in the Pacific—and vaccination sceptics at home—were going to have a real object lesson! "Preventive medical science"—with a subject race to practice upon, with absolute police power, with practically limitless American dollars at its command, and with A. M. Atite pus punchers in the van—was going to absolutely prevent smallpox in the Philippine Islands. That was the promise yodeled and heralded throughout Pus Punchdom and here is the performance.

In 1918 the Philippine Health Service shot 3,285,376 slugs of pus into that number of Filipinos and reaped a harvest of 47,369 cases of smallpox with 16,447 deaths!

In 1919 they "improved the service" and delivered 7,670,252 pus puncheries into their brown brethren and reaped a harvest of 65,180 cases of smallpox with 44,408 deaths!

About this time they ran out of pus or their death rate appalled 'em or the Filipinos had fled beyond even police pursuit. The fact is that squads of pus

Proof of this is seen in the foot-and-mouth disease outbreaks in 1902 and 1903, and again a bigger one in 1908. THEY WERE CAUSED BY VACCINE VIRUS.
